

Turkey takes over American bases

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey, angered by a continuing U.S. arms embargo, assumed authority Saturday over all 20 American military installations here.

The cabinet declared Friday that bilateral defense treaties with Washington were "no longer valid" and activity at the U.S. bases had to cease at midnight.

"We are effectively assuming control of all American bases," Interior Minister Oguzhan Asilturk said. When asked if the American personnel would be forced to leave he replied, "The details are to be worked out by the Turkish general staff according to the needs of the situation."

President Ford issued a statement in Washington saying the suspension of U.S. activities "will work to the detriment of critically important U.S. security interests." He said he hoped the House of Representatives would reconsider the matter "in view of these damaging developments."

Turkey's reaction followed a 223-206 vote Thursday by the House against resuming American arms shipments to this North Atlantic Treaty Organization country.

The Ford administration had sought a partial lifting of the arms ban imposed in February because of the Turkish invasion of Cyprus a year ago.

Turkey's decision, broadcast by the state radio and television, said all U.S. military installations on Turkish soil would be placed under control of Turkish armed forces.

A special status was designed for the strategic air base with nuclear bombers at Incirlik, in southeast Turkey. The announcement said all activity at Incirlik not relating to joint defense of the North Atlantic Alliance would be halted. It did not elaborate.

The United States has about 7,000 military men stationed in Turkey. Besides the Incirlik base, the U.S. installations consist of intelligence-gathering radar stations which provide surveillance of the Soviet Union. Some are small stations with five or six men.

The statement said the bilateral defense treaties between Turkey and the United States, under which the installations were set up, were no longer valid.

Turkey had called for negotiations over the arms embargo last month and had given the United States a one-month deadline before the bases would be placed on an unclarified "temporary status," but action was postponed until after the House vote.

Ford sent a telegram to Ankara immediately after the House vote asking the government not to close the bases, and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger telephoned Prime Minister Suleiman Demirel urging "restraint."

Demirel had said that "the scope and the limits of

Youth freed by Africans

Staff Writer

Stephen Smith, the 22-year-old Stanford student from Garden Grove held captive by rebels in east Africa since May 19, was released unharmed Friday.

Mrs. Mittie Smith, his mother, said a Stanford University official phoned her at 5 p.m. with news of the release. They said her son had walked free into Kigoma, Tanzania, at 4:30 a.m. PDT time and was in good condition.

Smith, of 1138 Jacale Lane, and three other students were kidnapped by the Popular Revolutionary Party, a Marxist guerilla group, from a remote private research station on Lake Tanganyika between Zaire and Tanzania.

One of the students, Barbara Smuts of Ann Arbor, Mich., was released May 25 to deliver the guerilla's demands for ransom money, weapons and the release of political prisoners in Tanzania.

The two other students, Carrie Hunter of Atherton, Calif., and Emilie Bergmann of the Netherlands, were released June 28.

Prof. David Hamburg, Stanford's representative in Tanzania, told Mrs. Smith her son was brought by his captors 25 miles across Lake Tanganyika from the Zaire side, where he had been held; to the Tanzanian side.

He then walked into Kigoma, where his father, Joseph Edward Smith, a longshoreman in the Long Beach area, had been waiting with Hamburg for several weeks.

Hamburg told university officials that it was "mutually agreed that the terms under which Smith and the three other students were released would remain secret."

Mrs. Smith said she expected Steve to phone her at 4 a.m. today.

"I'm very happy and thankful my son has finally been released," Mrs. Smith said.

Negotiations for Smith's release were slow and frustrating. The governments of Zaire and Tanzania refused to meet the rebel's demands, and the State Department recruited neutral go-betweens to deal with the PRP, whose base was hidden in remote bush country.

Smith's father spent two months in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, working for Steve's freedom while Mrs. Smith remained in Garden Grove.

On June 6 Mrs. Smith taped a personal plea to the PRP expressing her anguish, which was translated and delivered to the rebels, and last week she tried to talk to President Ford by telephone.

TV performers slain, linked to 3rd murder

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Police investigated a possible link Friday between the "execution" slaying of an aerospace executive's wife and the slayings of an actor and the actress daughter-in-law of entertainer Ethel Merman.

Police said the actress was Barbara Colby, who was estranged from Miss Merman's son, Robert Levin.

"We think the cases are related, because of the proximities of the crimes and the similarities," said Venice Division Sgt. Larry Kallestad.

Six men were apprehended in four separate arrests Friday following the attacks that occurred within a 40-minute period late Thursday. All were booked for investigation of robbery.

Police investigator Paul Burks said his office was trying to determine whether murder charges should be filed.

Miss Colby, 36, and actor James Kiernan, 35, both of whom had recently won roles in television comedy series, were killed as they walked to their cars in a Venice parking lot shortly before

Ford urges reforms in food-stamp use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford urged Congress Friday to slash the "almost uncontrolled" costs of the federal food stamp program by enacting reforms to tighten eligibility requirements.

Ford included a stinging criticism of the food stamp program in a special message to Congress which, ironically, transmitted his request for an extra $3 billion to finance the existing food stamp program in the 1976 fiscal year which began July 1.

The additional funds would bring the projected total cost of the program to $6.8 billion, compared with about $5 billion in fiscal 1975.

Ford's supplemental money request had been expected, since his initial budget proposal last February clearly covered only part of the program's cost.

But he used the message to attack the program's rapidly rising costs.

"Only 10 years ago, there were fewer than 500,000 people participating in the program at a cost of $36 million," he said.

Participants has expanded to 20 million and the costs to $6.8 billion ... In short, what has evolved in just 10 years is another massive, multi-billion dollar program, almost uncontrolled and fully supported by federal taxpayers."

Ford said the cost of the program had nearly doubled in the past six months alone. He acknowledged that "the unemployment rate had been a factor in the increase" but said the existing law was basically flawed because it "invites almost unlimited expansion" of the program.

"In fairness to those truly in need," he said, "we must focus foodstamp assistance on them," and

"in fairness to the overburdened taxpayers who must pay the bills, we must tighten eligibility and participation requirements."

Ford called for hearings "at the earliest possible date" on legislation, already introduced in both houses of Congress, that would make people eligible for foodstamps only if their gross incomes do not exceed official federal poverty guidelines — now about $5,000 a year for a family of four.

A complex series of income deductions permitted by present food stamp laws allows many families with gross incomes well above the official poverty line to get food stamps.

Ford said he would not accept the idea that the food stamp program "cannot be controlled and that ever-increasing costs are inevitable... Every public program is controllable."

Apollo crew hospitalized

HONOLULU (AP) — Three Apollo astronauts, gassed on their return to earth, were hospitalized Friday for at least two days while doctors checked for serious damage to their lungs from possibly poisonous fumes.

Doctors said astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton were "resting comfortably" in the Tripler Army Hospital, but were being watched carefully for any injury from possible inhalation of the poison gas fumes.

The suspected gas can have delayed and serious effect, such as pneumonia.

DR. ARNOLD Nicogossian, the Apollo crew surgeon, said that X ray, pulmonary function and blood chemistry tests were being conducted at the army hospital's intensive care ward and that "there is no change in the crewmen's status."

Doctors said the hospitalization was to determine the extent of lung irritation suffered by the men and that plans to fly the astronauts to Houston today were canceled. They said the men would remain hospitalized at least until Sunday.

Corlison was being administered to reduce inflammation and other symptoms, Nicogossian said.

The astronauts were described as "happy and smiling" as they entered the hospital. Officials said they were taken to the intensive care ward, but only because of the equipment available there for their treatment.

OFFICIALS said the astronauts may have been exposed for 9 to 11 minutes to a rocket fuel oxidizer known as nitrogen tetroxide. A gas filled their cabin as the spacecraft descended toward splashdown.

Nitrogen tetroxide is described in medical books as "one of the most insidious gases" which can cause only slight pain upon initial contact but that possibly lead to serious lung congestion several days later.

In effect, the hospitalization was ordered to determine if these effects develop.

Stafford, the spacecraft commander, asked officials to notify the astronauts' wives and "tell them we're feeling pretty good."

GAS streamed into the space cabin as the Apollo spacecraft fell toward the Pacific Ocean splashdown 330 miles west of here.

"We believe there is no danger of a collapsed lung," said Dr. Jerry Hordinsky, an astronaut physician. "What they're being observed for at the present is irritation of the lungs and we do not know the extent of it ... The purpose of this is to see if it progresses or subsides."

Moments after the spacecraft splashed into the water, Slayton indicated to frogmen swimming beside the bobbing Apollo that there had been a problem.

Senate OKs U.S. landings for SSTs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate declined by a 46-44 vote Friday to deny the Concorde supersonic plane the right to land in the United States.

The outcome was a victory for the Ford administration, which advised senators the ban would be regarded as an unfriendly act by France and Great Britain, developers of the Concorde.

Its adoption, administration spokesmen said, could lead to retaliatory moves against sales of U.S. aircraft abroad. For years such sales have been a major American export.

SENS. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and William Proxmire, D-Wis., leading the fight for the ban, argued that the Concorde, which can cross the Atlantic in about three hours, far exceeded the noise standards set for American airports.

They also contended that, if large numbers of SSTs go into service, they eventually could harm the earth's protective ozone layer; that the Concorde uses 2 to 3 times more fuel than subsonic jets, and that it would be used chiefly by the rich.

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., arguing against the ban, said hundreds of American planes now flying, including the Boeing 707, the Douglas DC8, and the Boeing 727, also exceed the noise standards. They were exempted because they were developed before the standards were imposed.

Cannon declared the environmental impact of the Concorde will be virtually nothing. Only 16 planes are being manufactured, he pointed out. If future SSTs are built, he said, they will have to meet the prescribed noise levels.

British Airways and Air France are asking permission to use the Concorde for six daily flights into the United States using Kennedy Airport in New York and Dulles Airport outside of Washington.

Opponents of the ban emphasized that the Federal Aviation Administration has not yet acted on the application.

However, Proxmire said he believed the FAA would approve the flights.

"I hold no bias against progress," Proxmire said. "I can appreciate, and have no argument with, the advanced level of technology that has gone into development of the SST."

"But the hard ecological lessons of recent history should awaken us to the realization that bigger, better or faster is not necessarily a goal to strive for."

Sen. Milton Young, R-N.D., administration spokesman in the fight, said access to the North Atlantic market "is critical to the success of the Concorde program."

The amendment carrying the ban was offered to a $4.2 billion appropriations bill for the Transportation Department.

1 dead as boat sinks, 2 missing

A power cruiser carrying four men ran into a low cable and sank off the Pales Verdes Peninsula late Friday night, killing one man and leaving one lost at sea.

Coast Guard spokesmen said two men were rescued and taken to a Redondo Beach hospital, but it wasn't immediately known how seriously they were injured.

They were identified as boat owner Tom Lowery, 50, of 26025 Saddle View Drive, Lomita, and Carl Golden, 55, of Sepulveda. Lowery reportedly suffered a broken leg, concussion and internal injuries, but Golden's injuries, if any, were not immediately known.

Identities of the dead man and the one still missing were withheld, pending notification of next of kin.

The collision occurred about 10 p.m. Friday, about two miles west of Pt. Vicente, when the 38-foot power boat Zonker I, from King Harbor in Redondo Beach, ran onto the hawser between a tug and a barge loaded with fuel tanks.

Crewmen from the Pacific Towboat and Salvage Company's Pacific Ranger, bound from their San Pedro base to San Francisco, reported the mishap to the Coast Guard, and rescued one of the boaters.

A passing pleasure craft rescued the second man from the water.

Both were taken to South Bay Hospital in Redondo Beach.

The search for the missing boater was being conducted by a Coast Guard helicopter and boat, and two Los Angeles County lifeguard boats.

Grain for Russ to hike U.S. prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent U.S. grain purchases by the drought-stricken Soviet Union, and prospects that Russian buying may resume, could boost food prices slightly for American consumers, Agriculture Department officials said Friday.

Assistant Secretary Richard E. Bell said that the Soviets might have to buy about six million metric tons of grain in addition to 13.8 million already announced this month and that most of any additional imports probably would come from U.S. stocks.

"Probably a good 4 or 5 (million) tons of that would need to come from the United States," Bell told a news conference.

The Soviet Union has bought 9.8 million tons of wheat, corn and barley from the United States in deals announced the past 10 days. Further purchases mentioned by Bell could boost the total to 14 million tons or more.

The Soviets also have bought about three million tons of wheat from Canada and 75,000 tons from Australia.

In 1972, when drought also hit the Soviet crop, purchases on the world market totaled almost 30 million tons, including 19 million from the United States.

A metric ton — the measurement usually used in U.S. grain sales — contains just under 2,200 pounds. A regular ton, also known as a short ton, contains 2,000 pounds. A long ton, often used by Canada in exports, contains 2,240 pounds.

Dawson Ahalt, USDA staff economist, said that if grain prices continue rising because of the Soviet purchases it could mean a slower recovery in the U.S. livestock industry and probably some rise in food prices.

The department has been estimating that 1975 retail food prices will go up 6 to 8 per cent, compared with increases of 14.5 per cent in each of the past two years, if farmers harvest record grain crops as USDA predicts.

Referring to the 6 to 8 per cent estimate, Ahalt said he "would be reluctant to raise that estimate very much for 1975." But he cautioned that higher prices of corn and other grain could cause farmers to go slow in expanding grain feeding of livestock which produce the nation's meat, milk and poultry. Ahalt said grain prices have increased since reports of Soviet purchasing began circulating earlier this month but added that "the question is how much of the current sale has been reflected" by those increases.

Bell, a career expert on foreign trade and commodities, said that there is no intention to impose export controls on U.S. grain

Beame 'angry' at aides for laxity

Combined News Service

NEW YORK — The mayor of the nation's largest city lost his temper Friday, dressing down New York officials for not taking the city's fiscal crisis seriously enough. "I am angry and upset that I have been taking a lot of flak on my credibility and the credibility of my administration," Mayor Abraham Beame told more than 80 agency heads and their assistants. "We are not in a 'business as usual' situation—you've got to get that through your heads." Beame charged agency heads had supplied him with faulty figures on personnel layoffs and were allowing many workers to leave early. New York must somehow come up with $791 million within the next four weeks to pay off notes and bonds that fall due in August. As of Friday, the city did not know where it was going to get the money. Meantime, the prestigious Moody's Investors Service delivered another blow to the city's credit rating, joining Standard and Poor's in withdrawing its credit recommendation on the city's short-term notes and bonds.

Most favored nation

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted 88 to 2 Friday to permit expanded U.S. trade with Romania in the wake of increased Jewish emigration from that country. The action sent to the House the resolution to extend most favored nation treatment to Romania. Before the vote, the Senate passed a nonbinding resolution declaring that President Ford should promise to revoke the trade benefit to Romania if emigration is again slowed. The two votes against expanded U. S.-Romanian trade were cast by Sens. James L. Buckley, Con-R-N.Y., and James B. Allen, D-Ala.

Encephalitis outbreak

GREENVILLE, Miss. — Children throwing rocks and bottles at mosquito-spraying trucks may have led to an epidemic of encephalitis that has killed five elderly persons in this Mississippi River Delta town. Fifty-eight cases of the mosquito-borne virus have been reported in eight Mississippi counties since June 24. Health officials now are waiting to see if an intensive spraying campaign is taking effect against the mosquitoes. Dr. Durward Blakey, director of disease control for the Mississippi Board of Health, said indications are that mosquitoes bred in a predominantly low-income area of Greenville after a mosquito-spraying program was unofficially halted for about two weeks earlier this summer due to harassment from children. The spraying trucks have since been equipped with protective steel screens and police cars cruise the neighborhood while spraying operations are conducted, Greenville authorities said Friday.

Sterilization ruling

BARNWELL, S.C. — All defendants in the Aiken County sterilization case were found innocent of racial discrimination against two welfare mothers, but one defendant was assessed nominal damages of $5 for violating one of the women's civil rights. A federal court jury returned its verdicts Friday, with only Dr. Clovis Pierce ordered to pay damages. Shirley Brown, one of two black women who initiated the civil damage suit, was awarded $5. The other plaintiff, Virgil Walker, received nothing. The jury ruled that Mrs. Brown's civil rights had been violated but that she had not been hurt by the violation.

Portugal forms new leadership

LISBON — Portugal's ruling armed forces created a triumvirate of generals Friday to govern the country with virtually unlimited powers. The decision by the 240-member Armed Forces Movement represented a victory for the Communist-backed premier, Gen. Vasco Gonçalves. Serving with Gonçalves on the directorate will be President Francisco de Costa Gomes — a moderate — and the national security chief, Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho. Carvalho is known as a nationalistic leftist. Moderate officers in the left-wing military government had opposed such a ruling trio on grounds that it was too great a concentration of authority. The decision was announced after a 14-hour meeting of the Armed Forces Movement assembly. A spokesman said the 30-man Revolutionary Council of top officers would serve as a consulting body. Earlier in the day Costa Gomes had cautioned the radicals against going to far too fast with their leftist "revolution."

India crackdown

NEW DELHI — Indian police jailed one the nation's most prominent editors Friday and invaded university campuses, cracking down on dissidents at the close of one month of authoritarian rule. Police arrested Kuldip Nayyar, described by a colleague as "the Jack Anderson of India" for his investigative reporting. Nayyar is the author of several books on Indian affairs and domestic editor of the wire service of the Express, India's largest-selling newspaper which has a circulation of 500,000. At New Delhi University, police vans, jeeps, and at least 500 patrolmen were stationed around the sprawling campus to make sure students attended classes. They tore down posters urging students to boycott classes to protest Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's declaration of a state of emergency July 28.

Copter crash kills 5 GIs

ANSBACH, Germany — Five American Army soldiers died Friday when their helicopter crashed about two miles south of Schwabach-Hall, the 1st Armored Division announced. The division spokesman said the helicopter was flying from Ansbach Army airfield to Stuttgart when it crashed just before noon. An eyewitness said the helicopter burst into flames moments after it crashed. Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Guerrilla rampage

BUENOS AIRES — Leftist guerrillas bombed, burned and shot up police stations and offices Friday night on a wild rampage through the Argentine capital and outlying districts. Four police officers and at least one guerrilla were wounded, police sources said. A police dragnet was clamped across the city. There were at least 20 attacks, including an army post, at least four police stations, the office of La Nacion newspaper and the rich Barrio Norte district's La Biela restaurant.

Ill Hathaway, in post 5 weeks, resigns

Combined News Service

Stanley K. Hathaway, hospitalized for psychiatric care since July 15 because of depression and exhaustion, resigned as secretary of interior Friday after only five weeks in office.

President Ford accepted the decision "with deepest regret."

The resignation becomes effective on appointment and Senate confirmation of a successor. White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the department will be run in the interim by its solicitor, Dale Frizzell.

Hathaway was 51 Saturday. He is a lawyer and was governor of Wyoming from 1967 to 1974.

He was sworn in June 13 after a grueling confirmation battle in the Senate during which virtually every major environmental group opposed his nomination.

The White House made public an exchange of letters between Hathaway and Ford, both dated Friday.

"It is with deepest regret that for reasons of personal health, I must ask you to accept my resignation," Hathaway wrote. Ford replied that he would accept the resignation "with my deepest regrets."

Kicked out

Dr. Carl McIntire, American president of the International Council of Christian Churches, was deported from Kenya Friday morning after a row that began when the church group praised the white minority government of Rhodesia.

Vice President Daniel Moi signed McIntire's deportation order after the minister demanded an apology from the Kenya government for its criticism of views expressed by McIntire at the ICC's ninth annual congress here.

Moi said: "President (Jomo) Kenyatta is annoyed, I am upset and the entire government is embarrassed by the utterances of this man who calls himself a Christian." He said he deplored McIntire's "hostile attitude."

McIntire's group, in a public relations release earlier this week, praised Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith as "an upholder of civilization in the face of hostility from black Africa, the Communist bloc and liberal democracies of the West." McIntire also criticized the larger World Council of Churches for its support of black liberation movements in Africa. Most Kenyan churches are affiliated with the World Council.

Denial

Former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir filed a $3-million damage suit in New York Friday in which she denied she was duped into supplying the Kremlin with information that led to the mass murders of Soviet Jews.

Mrs. Meir, now living in retirement in Tel Aviv, denied as "false and malicious" a magazine article that said she provided Josef Stalin, at his request, a list of all those Soviet Jews who wished to serve in the Israeli War of Independence.

Stalin, the article said, "handed the list over to his secret police who arrested the proposed voluntary army and sent the volunteers off to concentration camps for extermination by hunger, labor and frost."

Author Lev Navrosov in the article entitled "Notes on American Innocence," which appeared in the August 1974 edition of Commentary, a magazine on Jewish affairs, said the incident occurred in 1948-49 when Mrs. Meir was the Israeli ambassador to the Soviet Union.

In addition to Navrosov, the defendants in the libel action were the American Jewish Committee of Manhattan, publishers of Commentary, and its editor, Norman Podhoretz.

hearings, conservation groups argued that in his two terms as Wyoming governor, Hathaway consistently put industry interests above environmental considerations.

At Ford's recommendation, Hathaway conferred with Dr. William Lukash, the President's physician, who urged his hospitalization and said he was suffering from "moderate depression brought on by physical exhaustion and fatigue."

Some sources have indicated that William Banowsky, president of Pepperdine University and a political ally of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, might be a candidate to replace Hathaway.

Playboy

A self-described playboy who was fired from a high paying Xerox Corporation sales job because of his flamboyant lifestyle has charged in a lawsuit that Xerox executives engage in a wide range of sexual activities when they attend sales training sessions in Florida.

Stuart Brauer was fired from his job after he was described in a magazine article as a swinging local playboy with an expensive apartment, fast cars and fast women.

He charged in the suit that high-level Xerox management personnel see the Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., training sessions as a "fun-in-the sun vacation from wives" with a lot of drinking and "extra-curricular activity with the opposite sex."

He said in a detailed deposition that sales managers attending the sessions talk about how to use the sales techniques they were taught on members of the opposite sex and would compete in singles bars to "see who could pick up the first girl or the best looking girl."

Brauer was accused by Xerox of engaging in an act of "exaggerated sexual misconduct" with a woman on a Ft. Lauderdale beach while attending one of the training sessions. He was dismissed from his $30,000 sales job after the article appeared and is now bankrupt.

Edgar Buchanan, 72, veteran character actor in scores of motion pictures, was in critical condition at Hollywood West Hospital Friday, suffering from a severe circulatory ailment. His son said that Buchanan would undergo surgery next week.

Christina Onassis Andreadis has offered to give the Greek navy $5 million and a high-speed gunboat, the government announced Friday in Athens.

The announcement said the offer was made when Christina, 24, met recently with Premier Constantine Caramanlis and had no connection with the will of her father Aristotle Onassis, which specified that half of his industrial-shipping empire, valued at close to $1 billion should go to charity. Onassis died in Paris last March.

The offer to the navy is due to the current crisis with neighboring Turkey. Other Greek shipping tycoons have already begun free construction of battle craft and have contributed millions of dollars.

Retiring

Dr. Martin Luther King Sr. formally announced his retirement as pastor of Atlanta's historic Ebenezer Baptist Church on Friday, but he said he would continue preaching.

"I'll preach my last official sermon Sunday," said King, 75, the stocky, grey-haired father of the assassinated civil rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The elder King, whose wife was slain 13 months ago during a service at the church, had been pastor of the church 44 years and once co-pastored it with both his sons.

"I want it crystal clear that my retirement had nothing to do with the passing of my wife," King told a news conference. He said he and his wife, Alberta, had discussed retirement before she was gunned down in June 1974 by a young black man as she played the organ.

"The church has become world known," said King, who is known to almost everyone as "Daddy King." "I didn't make that possible. My late son, Martin, made that possible."

L.B. deal offered for RTD terminal

From Our L.A. Bureau
Long Beach Mayor Thomas J. Clark said Friday that the city is willing to turn $20 million in local transit funds over to the county in exchange for the promise that Long Beach will be one of the terminal points in a county-wide rapid transit system.
Clark made the announcement during a State Senate Committee hearing convened by Sen. Nate Holden, D-Los Angeles, in Los Angeles.
The mayor told the committee that the city's $20 million—which already has been earmarked for the construction of a transportation center and 2.8-mile "peoplemover" in downtown Long Beach—could help the county generate an additional $80 million in federal funds.

Fare grounds

Can Action Line explain the eligibility requirements for the senior citizen reduced-rate bus passes in Long Beach? It irritates me that my neighbor who is 65 years old cannot get a pass because she is not receiving Social Security. S.T., Long Beach.

Your neighbor was misinformed. All persons over 65, whether they're employed or retired, are eligible for the dime-a-ride reduced rate, according to a spokeswoman for the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. A senior citizen need not be receiving Social Security to qualify, but what may have caused the mix-up with your neighbor is that if a person has a Medicare card, he is supposed to use that as his bus pass for the special fare. If he doesn't have a Medicare card, he can obtain a pass for the reduced rate. If a person is between the ages of 62 and 65, he can qualify for the reduced rate if he is retired. Permanently disabled adults also are eligible for the dime-a-ride passes and blind individuals can apply for identification cards that will permit them to ride at no charge on any Long Beach bus. The special passes for the elderly, blind and disabled are issued at the Long Beach Public Transportation Co., 1300 Gardena Ave., Mondays and Tuesdays, 12:30 p.m. to 4:45 p.m., and Wednesdays through Fridays, 9:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. The passes also can be obtained at the Senior Opportunity Services Center, 406 E. First St., on Mondays, 10 a.m. to noon, and at the All States Society, 108 E. Ocean Blvd., on Tuesdays, 10 a.m. to noon.

Oxygen bills

My wife has a terminal illness and must have oxygen every day. Since July 1973, she's been eligible for Medicare coverage and under this program, her oxygen bills are supposed to be paid by Blue Shield and her other medical expenses by Occidental Insurance. When my wife first started receiving Medicare benefits, we had no problems getting Occidental to process her claims, but we couldn't get anything out of Blue Shield. After working on our problem for 10 months last year, Action Line finally managed to get Blue Shield to process the claims and I thought everything would go smoothly from then on. It has with Blue Shield, but now I can't get Occidental to pay its share of the bills. Since September, I've submitted more than $700 in claims and haven't received payment. I had to take out a loan to pay off the doctor bill. Can Action Line try to help me once more? R.A., Long Beach.
You have now received payment for all of the claims submitted as of June 11 and the bills you sent Occidental recently are being processed. The insurance company's computerized payment system inexplicably started rejecting your claims several months ago, but, according to a spokesman for the firm, this problem has been corrected. The bills you submit in the future should be paid routinely within four to eight weeks — the normal processing time for Medicare claims.

House help?

I recently read that Gov. Brown and President Ford have signed bills to help low-income families buy homes and I'd like to get more information on these laws. J.W., Long Beach.
The housing programs you refer to haven't been set up yet and there currently is no major federal or state mortgage subsidy plan in operation. The recently passed state and federal housing legislation primarily will provide low-interest loans for the construction of new rental units and owner-occupied dwellings for low and moderate-income families. A limited number of mortgage subsidies for existing houses may be available under the federal program, but no definite guidelines have been established, said a government spokesman. It will probably take several months for the government to set up the agencies to implement the new legislation. Until 1973, the federal government had a large-scale mortgage subsidy program — the GSP-235 plan — but it has not been resumed. Occasionally, a government repossession of a house sold under GSP-235 or FHA terms will be resold with only a 3-per cent down payment required, but this is a very limited program. Such houses in Long Beach are handled by the Mead Redevelopment Corp., 3850 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Calif. 90007, 233-6164.

REACTION

In response to "Disgusted", the 22-year-old single girl who was so upset that it would cost her an $80 premium with a $250 deductible clause to insure her $350 color TV against theft, she should realize that insurance should be a device to pay for losses that could seriously affect the well-being of a person or company — really major losses. An insurance company should not be asked to insure small losses that can be handled by the insurance buyer. When an insurance company pays such small losses as for a dent in fender or a visit to a doctor's office, the insurance buyer is on the short end of the stick. It costs the insurance companies too much to process small payments to make such coverage worthwhile to the buyer. J.E.M., Lakewood.

Big white shark hooked off Avalon

Associated Press
A great white shark, the kind which terrorizes a fictitious Atlantic Coast village in the recent film "Jaws," has been caught off the coast of Catalina Island, officials confirmed Friday.
"It was a biggy," said lifeguard Lt. Paul McIlroy of the island catch. "It was big and thick and round. Its jaws were unbelievable. The teeth were about 1.5 inches in diameter and 4 to 5 inches long. They were big."
James Phelan, a marine biologist for the state Department of Fish and Game in San Diego, said the shark caught Thursday measured about 15 feet long and weighed more than 1,000 pounds.
He said the man-eating creature was hauled out of the water by the fishing boat Heather B., and taken to Avalon Harbor.
"I told them to hoist it back on the boat and get it out of the bay," said harbor-master John Phelps. "The less said about this, the better, and I think you can understand why," he told a reporter.
A spokesman for the boat owner said the Heather B., skippered by Brian Hawthorne of Escondido, apparently harpooned the giant shark as crewmen attempted to fish for swordfish.
A fish and game spokesman said the shark may be brought to the Scripps Institute of Oceanography in San Diego for study.
Earlier Thursday, a 23-year-old San Marino man suffered minor injuries when he was half-swallowed and spit out by another 15-foot shark near Santa Barbara. It was not known if that was also a great white shark.

Officials said they estimate construction of the facilities would cost about $30 million. They said they had planned that the city would apply for the additional $10 million from the federal government, but decided that using the $20 million through the county would be a big gain for everyone involved.
If the county accepts the city's offer, Long Beach will have its transportation center and people mover, plus designation as a terminal city on the county's rapid transit line, and the county will wind up $70 million ahead, officials said.
Clark told the committee meeting Friday that city officials believe Long Beach's contribution to the rapid transit starter line would then be $70 million, even though that amount would have come from the federal government.
If the plan Clark announced Friday is not approved, Long Beach's contribution to the rapid transit system would be $2.5 million in gasoline tax funds. Those funds are collected by the city under Proposition 5, which allows a certain percentage of gasoline taxes to be earmarked for the design and construction of rapid transit systems.

THE proposed $1 billion rapid transit starter line, to be constructed under authority of the Southern California Rapid Transit District, would run from Canoga Park to Long Beach.
Clark's presentation was made shortly after other witnesses had testified that there would be a need to shorten the proposed link between Long Beach and Canoga Park if the City of Los Angeles' proposal for a starter line were adopted.
Los Angeles City Planner Calvin Hamilton proposed a starter line, mostly in subway form, from Universal City through the Hollywood Hills and along Wilshire Boulevard to the downtown Los Angeles area.
Clark stressed that Long Beach would put up its $20 million only if the adopted route stretches from Canoga Park through Burbank and Glendale to downtown Los Angeles and on to Long Beach and the Long Beach-Los Angeles harbors.

"If the line doesn't reach Long Beach, we are going to be very unhappy," Clark told the committee.
Holden's committee heard testimony to the effect that the route proposed by Los Angeles would be more costly than the Burbank-Glendale link.
Clark said the city's proposal would allow the new transportation center to become part of the regional starter line, with administration duties shared by the city and the RTD.
The final decision on routing will be made by the RTD board of directors, officials said.

Long Beach Mayor Thomas J. Clark said Friday that the city is willing to turn $20 million in local transit funds over to the county in exchange for the promise that Long Beach will be one of the terminal points in a county-wide rapid transit system.
Clark made the announcement during a State Senate Committee hearing convened by Sen. Nate Holden, D-Los Angeles, in Los Angeles.
The mayor told the committee that the city's $20 million—which already has been earmarked for the construction of a transportation center and 2.8-mile "peoplemover" in downtown Long Beach—could help the county generate an additional $80 million in federal funds.

Solons and educators blast education veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford vetoed the $1.5 billion Education Appropriation Act of 1976 Friday, noting it called for spending $1.5 billion more than his budget proposal.

He urged Congress to sustain the veto, his 35th since taking office almost a year ago, so it would be possible to "work together — as we have before — to achieve a reasonable compromise."

The House set Tuesday, Sept. 9, for a vote on overriding the veto.

James A. Harris, president of the National Education Association, called the veto "a national disgrace" and urged Congress to override it and "make available the badly needed funds to operate the nation's schools."

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., issued a statement saying: "Our bill was over the budget only because the administration's request was so inadequate to begin with."

Ford said that, while he has long believed that education "is one of the strong foundation stones of our Republic," the issue is "whether we are going to spend ourselves into fiscal insolvency."

Ford read a statement in the Oval Office pointing out that this was the first regular appropriation bill passed by Congress this year.

He has set the limit for a budget deficit for fiscal 1976 at $60 billion, Ford noted, while Congress wants to set the deficit level at $69 billion.

It now appears there may be an estimated deficit this year of over $83.6 billion, "according to Congress' own budget calculations," he noted.

Banks deny minority home loans 2-to-1, survey says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government survey of six cities showed Friday that banks are nearly twice as likely to refuse mortgage loans to minority applicants as to whites of the same financial status.

The survey of banking practices in Cleveland, Memphis, Montgomery, Tampa, Tucson and Bridgeport, Conn., said minority applicants for mortgage loans were rejected 24.7 per cent of the time and white applicants 14.3 per cent.

The survey was conducted by the Comptroller of the Currency and made public by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, who said the results "suggest that mortgage lenders are discriminating against blacks and other minorities."

"While it is theoretically possible that lenders might be basing their decision on factors other than race, there is no evidence in the figures compiled by the comptroller to support this theory."

Main points of the survey:

— "Large differences were found in the rejection rate between white and black applicants with the same economic characteristics traditionally considered by lenders to determine credit worthiness. These included income, the number of years at present occupation, amount of outstanding debt, amount of monthly installment payments and amount of assets."

— "Minority applicants earning $10,000 to $15,000 per year were rejected 29.5 per cent of the time compared to 15.6 per cent for white applicants in the same income bracket."

— "Minority applicants with over five years on the job were rejected 23.2 per cent of the time compared to 14.1 per cent for white applicants with the same length of service."

— "Minority applicants with more than $20,000 in assets were rejected 21.6 per cent of the time, compared to 14.1 per cent for white applicants with comparable assets."

The 1968 Fair Housing Act outlaws discrimination in mortgage lending.

Proxmire said the survey results prove the administration has not attempted to enforce the act.

Since that ruling, construction unions have sought to get a "sit-in (on site) picketing" bill into law.

The House measure would, in effect, overturn the 24-year-old Supreme Court decision and say that contractors and subcontractors on the same construction site are involved in a common economic enterprise.

House OKs union right to picket building sites

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Friday to permit labor unions to picket construction sites, a major goal of organized labor for nearly a quarter of a century.

The measure was approved on a 230-178 vote and sent to the Senate, where a similar bill has been approved by a Labor and Welfare subcommittee.

The bill would give construction workers the same picket rights in a strike as industrial unions now have without being held in violation of the secondary boycott provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Supreme Court ruled in 1951 that picketing at a construction site involving a number of employers not party to the labor dispute fell into the category of prohibited secondary boycotts and was illegal.

Since that ruling, construction unions have sought to get a "sit-in (on site) picketing" bill into law.

The House measure would, in effect, overturn the 24-year-old Supreme Court decision and say that contractors and subcontractors on the same construction site are involved in a common economic enterprise.

Other major arms buyers last year were West Germany with $283 million, South Korea with $217.8 million, Greece with $195.4 million, Australia with $156.7 million, Taiwan, $104.6 million and Canada with $100.7 million.

Although Turkey was under a U.S. arms sales embargo for much of last year, it put in orders for nearly $69 million.

At the bottom of the list were Finland, which bought $41,000 worth of military equipment, the Dominican Republic with $2,000 in orders and Egypt, which has not bought military gear from the United States for many years, with $5,000 in orders.

May call Nixon as witness

Spy probe bares 'new examples'

By JOSEPH VOLZ
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate Intelligence Committee has uncovered "many new" examples of law-breaking by U.S. intelligence agencies within the U.S. and may extend its investigation a year, the New York News learned Friday.

A reliable source said the panel was particularly interested in the top secret activities of the huge National Security Agency, located at Ft. Meade, 20 miles north of Washington.

AMONG the charges the committee staff is investigating is an allegation that NSA and the FBI routinely monitored commercial cable traffic to and from the United States, including messages between foreign embassies and their governments.

NSA, part of the Defense Department, is supposed to break foreign codes and intercept electronic communications overseas. But the agency reportedly also has been illegally tuning in on domestic phone calls which are sent overseas by microwave.

THE SOURCE said the committee could not finish its job by its September deadline, nor by next February, the extension Sen. Frank Church D-Idaho, committee chairman, is seeking. The source said it would take well into next year because the staff "has raised many more questions than we have been able to answer so far."

The committee also is looking closely at the FBI, which has broken into hundreds of embassies and consulates throughout the country, including those of friendly countries such as France and Japan, to obtain code books for NSA to crack.

The Senate Intelligence Committee may call Richard Nixon as a witness in the investigation of the 1970 assassination of Chilean Gen. Rene Schneider, congressional sources said Friday.

ALTHOUGH the committee, which has been probing CIA murder plots for seven months, has no evidence that Nixon was involved in the Schneider case, Church is known to believe that the "chain of authority" from the President to the CIA should be examined.

The CIA is believed to have provided limited assistance to the killers of Schneider but did not approve the murder.

A few weeks ago Church insisted that the ailing Nixon would not be asked to testify about any assassination plots but might be called to discuss illegal CIA domestic spying.

The reason for the change in plans appears to be news reports in recent days indicating that Nixon was at that time incensed at the thought of Communist Salvador Allende taking over as president of Chile.

NIXON reportedly ordered both the CIA and the State Department to exert pressure to stop the Marxist victory.

There is no indication, highly reliable sources have said, that Nixon ever ordered anyone to carry out an assassination attempt, however.

The sources said that he did tell a reluctant Secretary of State William Rogers to put economic and political pressure on Chile to thwart Allende who was elected anyhow.

Rogers refused to follow Nixon's instructions and cabled the U.S. ambassador in Chile not to take part in any efforts to overthrow Allende.

SOURCES said that it was "possible" that the CIA could have interpreted Nixon's wrath as an order to take some sort of violent action. The agency did supply leaders of several coup attempts with weapons but reportedly did not participate in Schneider's murder or the assassination of Allende three years later.

The committee hopes to complete its assassination investigation next month and plans to issue a report which probably will contend that the CIA participated in at least six attempts to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. But just who ordered the attempts probably will never be known because both Kennedy and Johnson are dead.

The committee also plans to look into CIA break-ins, buggings, mail openings and infiltration of domestic groups in the second part of the investigation. The FBI and several military organizations will also be probed before the committee winds up business next year.

$9.1 billion arms sales last year sets U.S. record

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $2 billion in new aircraft orders by four NATO countries pushed total U.S. arms sales last fiscal year to a record of nearly $9.1 billion, Pentagon figures showed Friday.

The arms sales total for the fiscal year, which ended on June 30 was $91.5 million higher than the previous year.

Pentagon officials had forecast that arms sales would decrease last year, but they said a decision by Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands and Norway to buy the new U.S. F16 air combat fighter instead of France's Mirage 1, canceled the earlier prediction of lower arms sales.

The Ford administration has been under increasing criticism in Congress for promoting sales of U.S. arms around the world. Critics contend these sales may encourage military adventurism.

The Pentagon arms report for fiscal 1975 listed 72 countries as U.S. arms customers, a net increase of three from the previous year.

The oil-rich Persian Gulf nations led the list, along with Israel.

Iran's total of $2,481,883,000 in orders last year represented a decrease of a little more than $1.3 billion.

Saudi Arabia registered $1,373,717,000 in new orders, up $587,698,000.

Israel ordered $868.3 million last year, a sharp drop of more than $1.2 billion. Much of this was attributable to a virtual freeze on new arms sales to Israel in the latter part of last fiscal year as the United States attempted to prod Tel Aviv into a further troop pullback in the Sinai.

Other major arms buyers last year were West Germany with $283 million, South Korea with $217.8 million, Greece with $195.4 million, Australia with $156.7 million, Taiwan, $104.6 million and Canada with $100.7 million.

More women admitting alcoholism problems

CHICAGO (UPI) — Alcoholism is more common in women than people realize and that has always been so, an article in the summer issue of Today's Health says.

"Most medical people now think of alcoholism as a sickness, no more shameful than the flu, Dr. Frank Seimas, medical director of the National Council on Alcoholism, said.

"Undoubtedly this is one reason why more and more women are coming forward today and saying, openly, that they have the sickness," he said.

"He said a third of all new members of Alcoholics Anonymous in the past five years have been women.

NCA's founder, Marty Mann, said it still is not easy for a woman to publicly admit she has a drinking problem.

"My guess," he said, "is that if you added up all the problem drinkers in the country today, the hidden as well as the revealed, the sex ratio would be just about 50-50."

The article, written by Max Gunther, cited a study of hundreds of middle-class alcoholic women in Britain. The average woman alcoholic in the study had her first drink before age 20 and the final "loss of control"—the advanced and final stage of alcoholism—happened at about age 42.

Reagan hits talk to dump Rocky

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Former Gov. Ronald Reagan said Friday it would be "rather shoddy treatment" to dump Vice President Nelson Rockefeller from the Republican ticket in 1976.

Reagan, talking to reporters about a suggestion from President Ford's campaign manager that the President may want a younger running mate next year, said, "It was enough for the President to say it should be up to the convention."

"Frankly, it's rather shoddy treatment," Reagan said.

Howard "Bo" Callaway, manager of the President's campaign, said earlier this week that Rockefeller is the "No. 1 problem" of the campaign in many states, particularly the South, where Reagan is more appealing.

"I just think this has been uncalled for," said Reagan.

Reagan, sizing up support for a possible presidential campaign of his own, spoke during his second visit to North Carolina within nine months.

Reagan appeared for a dinner sponsored by supporters of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who reportedly is boosting Reagan for the Republican nomination.

Reagan, talking to reporters prior to the dinner, said he appreciated the formation of a committee designed to convince him to seek the presidency. "They may be provide the information" needed to make a decision on whether to run.

Reagan said he would not accept the vice presidential nomination. "I'm not interested in it," he said.

Rocky criticizes Callaway to Ford

By HARRY KELLY
Kuligat News Service

WASHINGTON — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller has complained directly to President Ford that his campaign manager is an "amateur" who "should be more worried about picking up delegates than putting down Rockefeller, according to an administration source."

As a result, Ford and Rockefeller have agreed, according to a source, to do some things and will publicly emphasize their "good personal relationship," such as appearing together Friday prior to Ford's departure for Europe.

Both the vice president and his congressional supporters let the White House know about their irritation with Howard (B.) Callaway who told news- men Rockefeller's age (67) was a "political concern" and that he was Ford's "No. 1 problem" in the South.

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, long a Rockefeller ally, reportedly sent the White House a biting query:

"Is Callaway managing Reagan's campaign or Ford's?"

Some liberal Republicans wondered privately whether Ford or one of his aides had authorized Callaway's remarks, and considered seeking a meeting with the President when he returns from Europe.

But an administration source suggested that as a result of the flap the White House has snapped a leash on Callaway, a former Georgia congressman and secretary of the Army.

"I think you're going to find Callaway spending more time looking for Ford delegates, which is supposed to be his job, and less time worrying about the vice president," he said.

Callaway told a group of newsmen Wednesday night that Rockefeller was Ford's major problem in the South in any scrap with former Gov. Ronald Reagan for the GOP nomination, and that Ford might want "a younger man" on the ticket.

Ford personally made no public effort at disclaiming his campaign manager's remarks. But he authorized his press secretary, Ron Nessen, to repeat a previous statement that he was "for" Rockefeller's nomination as vice president.

At their regular weekly meeting Thursday, a source said, Rockefeller told Ford he considered Callaway's performance to be amateurish and "maladroit."

Rockefeller also talked twice with the campaign manager on the telephone, in exchanges said to be friendly, but frank.

"I hope that the President is not in the process of being concerned about his right flank losing sight of his center," said Sen.

Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y. But conservative Republican Sen. John Tower of Texas shrugged it off saying, "I don't think that (Callaway's comment) is going to hurt anything in the long run."

Strauss irked by Brown's advice

United Press International

Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss, heading a group considering Los Angeles as the party's 1976 presidential convention site, said Friday Gov. Brown should run his job and let Strauss run his.

Strauss' remarks to reporters came after Brown suggested the Democrats quit worrying about hotel rooms, dinners at fancy restaurants and "freebies" and concentrate on unemployment and inflation.

"We can sleep in church basements," Brown said.

Obviously nettled by Brown's jibe, Strauss said the governor was giving a wrong impression of what the Democrats are looking for in a convention site.

"We're not looking for expensive restaurants nor are we out here for a gay time," Strauss said. "We're out here to find facilities that will accommodate a great many people."

Los Angeles is considered a second runner to New York as the probable location of the party's 1976 convention.

"It would be more pleasant if the governor would enthusiastically welcome us here, but he knows that we don't need him to put on a convention and we know that, too."

Strauss said that Brown, a Democrat and successor to Republican Ronald Reagan, was doing a "credible" job in California.

"I'm not going to run his job for him and I'm not going to let him run my job for me. I might add," Strauss said.

Educators blast Brown 'tax shift'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state's school boards criticized Gov. Brown Friday and said climbing property values are letting the state shift more of the school support burden to local taxpayers.

School board members have watched a slow but persistent erosion of school programs in California, Joseph Brooks, executive secretary of the California School Boards Association, told a news conference.

He said the boards are holding out for $115 million in inflation relief for the state's public schools, an amount Brown has said he would veto.

"Anything less would be a farce," Brooks said. He said a $115 million bill could save as many as 5,000 school jobs which otherwise would be lost in layoffs or attrition.

HE ALSO said new estimates that statewide property assessments will increase 11.7 per cent this year, instead of 8.5 per cent as earlier forecast, will save the state millions at the expense of local taxpayers.

Officials in the state Department of Education said the state's savings would be about $30 million this year. The disclosure could influence the fate of a school aid bill awaiting legislative action Aug. 4.

The bill by Sen. Albert Rodda, D-Sacramento, would give the schools $115 million in state money, but Brown said last month he would approve only $88 million. The bill fell three votes short on a midnight ballot in the Senate before the July recess.

Rodda says he is confident of quick legislative passage next month, but uncertain about Brown's stance. The governor has said he will demand new educational reforms before approving any more school money.

"We're not opposed to reform of education, but we can't deal in a void," Brooks said. "We don't know where the governor is."

HE SAID the CSBA has tried fruitlessly for six months to meet with Brown and tell him of the schools' plight.

Under state law, schools are allowed a fixed amount of money per pupil from state and local sources. When the local contribution rises through an increase in property value, the state contribution decreases.

The new assessments will not increase local tax rates, but they will result in shifting more of the school tax burden from the state to the counties, Brooks said.

"This is moving in an anti-Serrano direction," he said, referring to a court ruling that California's system of letting districts of unequal wealth finance schools by property tax is unconstitutional.

Brooks also took issue with the governor's criticisms of rapidly growing adult education and summer school programs.

Adult education, which Brown has labeled as full of frill courses, has a 5 per cent growth limit in the state budget. At Brown's insistence, Rodda's bill includes a 20 per cent cut in state support of summer school.

"Elder citizens have been working and paying taxes to support the school system, and for the first time they have a chance to take something back in adult education," Brooks said.

"District after district is cutting back to five periods a day," he added. "If a kid fails a course, the only alternative is summer school. And under the current employment conditions, kids can't get a summer job."

Ford sees pact as freedom move

By STAN CARTER
Knight News Service
WASHINGTON — President Ford Friday said that the document he will sign with Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev and 33 other government heads in Helsinki next week will help "to support the aspirations for freedom and national independence of the peoples of Eastern Europe."

Ford assured representatives of ethnic groups from countries under Soviet domination that his decision to sign a European security agreement at an East-West summit does not mean that the United States has abandoned support for the aspirations of the people in the captive nations.

On the contrary, he declared: "I believe the outcome of this European security conference will be a step — how long a step remains to be tested — in that direction."

The 96-page declaration that will be signed in Helsinki next Friday is intended to be a guideline for relations between the countries of Europe. Critics have charged that it gives approval to the Soviet absorption of the Baltic countries at the end of World War II and that it would permanently freeze the Iron Curtain.

But Ford assured the representatives of ethnic groups at a White House meeting that this was not so.

"I can assure you as one who has long been interested in this question that the United States has never recognized the Soviet incorporation of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia and is not doing so now," the President said. "Our official policy of nonrecognition is not affected by the results of the European Security conference."

Amplifying on the President's assertion that the document would, in fact, foster independence of the people of Eastern Europe, Secretary of State, Henry A. Kissinger and at a press conference later:

"It is our belief that the easing of tensions in the world, and the easing of tensions in Europe, will help ease the lives of people... this is the sense in which the President spoke."

Kissinger acknowledged that the European security agreement had been a Soviet goal for more than 20 years. But he said the Russians had gotten less from the agreement than they had hoped for and that "on the whole, we consider the content of the conference useful."

He said the United States does not consider the document an additional ratification of the borders already existing in Europe.

In addition to Helsinki, Ford will visit West Germany, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia during a 10-day European tour beginning today.

"I hope my visits to Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia will again demonstrate our continuing friendship and interest in the welfare and progress of the fine people of Eastern Europe," the President said.

Panel OKs 10% arms-program cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate-House negotiators agreed Friday to cut the administration's proposed military weapons program by 10 per cent, but gave the go-ahead for production of the highly controversial nuclear strike cruiser.

After two months of conferences, the negotiators approved a fiscal 1976 military procurement authorization totaling about $25.8 billion, $2.5 billion less than the Pentagon asked.

The authorization measure still must be approved by the Senate and House before it can be sent to President Ford.

The House, without any request from the administration, included $60 million for long-lead items on the strike cruiser which the Senate did not include in its bill. But during the negotiations, Ford asked the conferees to include the $60 million as a budget item.

Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., of the Senate Armed Services Committee said the conference report included money for the strike cruiser and called it "the ship of the future."

Underlining the negotiators' decision to proceed with the nuclear strike cruiser was elimination of $332 million for the nuclear-powered frigate DLGN42 and barring of the installation of the Aegis Air Defense System on an existing ship as proposed by the House.

Another major weapons system in dispute was the advanced B1 bomber — designed to replace the B52 — for which the administration asked, and the House bill provided, $77 million for initial production. The Senate had refused any production money.

The negotiators agreed to provide $64 million for further long-term development of the B1 development, but they also wrote into the legislation a ban against entering into any production contracts for the bomber.

Stennis specifically stated that the funds for long-lead development items did not constitute a congressional commitment to go ahead with production of the B1.

Rejected by the conferees was a Senate-approved proposal to prohibit testing of a maneuvering re-entry vehicle (MARV) on a ballistic missiles system unless Ford certified Russia was holding similar tests or taking actions which would make U.S. testing a necessity.

Also dropped by the conferees were funds for 24 A7Ds for the National Guard, language holding up research and development funds for the Navy's F18 combat fighter, and money for the Army heavy-lift helicopter.

In other compromises, the negotiators agreed on a reduction of 32,000 military and civilian personnel, to permit women into the military academies beginning with next year's classes, hold a 5 per cent ceiling on pay raises if a similar bid is imposed on civil service employees, ordered a reduction of enlisted aides to officers from 500 to 400 and extended authority for credit and guaranty sales of military equipment through June 30, 1977.

Only 6 Jordan missile units OK'd

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
WASHINGTON — Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Friday that the chiefs had unanimously recommended that Jordan be sold only six batteries of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles, not the 14 proposed by the Ford administration.

Testifying at a closed-door hearing of the committee Friday morning on the controversial $350 million sale of a modern air defense system to Jordan, Brown said the chiefs had decided that there were only six sites that needed sophisticated Hawk ground-to-air missiles, and that six batteries, with six launchers to a battery, were sufficient for Jordan's needs.

A participant in the hearing said some of the members were "startled" because until then the administration had claimed in testimony that 14 batteries were the minimum for Jordan to have a system.

Ever since the administration informed Congress two weeks ago of its intention to sell the air defense system, there has been active opposition in both houses of Congress, with a joint resolution pending to kill the sale as provided under law.

The House International Relations Committee recommended Friday that the House stop the sale.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee was

OAS ready to lift Cuba sanctions

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — The Organization of American States Friday moved within sight of ending its 11-year diplomatic ban on Cuba when it agreed to convene a special foreign ministers' conference next week to lift the punitive measures imposed on the Fidel Castro government in 1964.

The one-day meeting to end the mandate of the 1964 sanctions will take place Tuesday in this Central American capital where the OAS just completed the revision of the 1947 Inter-American mutual assistance pact or Rio treaty.

The outcome of Tuesday's conference is considered a foregone conclusion: the United States and at least 13 other nations, the minimum vote required, already are committed to support a Mexican resolution leaving the OAS nations free to decide what course they wish to take regarding Cuba.

Fed policy said recovery threat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nobel Prize-winning economist Paul Samuelson said Friday the Federal Reserve has adopted monetary targets that threaten to abort recovery from the recession.

Testifying before Congress' Joint Economic Committee, Samuelson — a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and author of an economics textbook which has educated generations of college students — disputed the view of the administration and Fed Chairman Arthur F. Burns that expansive policies would touch off a resurgence of inflation.

He said because there is so much unemployment and unused capacity in the economy, the danger of inflation from stimulative policies is scant. "It is in this first year of recovery that we can prudently afford to insist on a strong growth target," he said.

But the goal which Burns "reaffirmed" before Congress Thursday, of a growth of money supply of 5 to 7.5 per cent, is too modest to finance recovery, Samuelson said. If threatens to "abort" recovery, he said.

Another witness, R.A. Gordon of the University of California at Berkeley, said the administration had adopted an economic "religion" which has two tenets: "keep the government out of things" and "5 to 6 per cent inflation is far worse than 9 to 10 per cent unemployment."

Elsewhere, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., proposed making permanent this year's $11 billion personal and corporate tax cut.

If the 1975 tax cut isn't extended and with Social Security taxes due to rise Jan. 1, taxpayers will have less to spend in 1976, Mondale said.

"Since economic recovery depends crucially on a revival of consumer confidence and consumer spending, we should act promptly to offset this upcoming jolt to consumers," he said.

The administration has not yet decided whether to recommend extension of the tax cut.

'Gas-guzzling' tax plan killed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee reversed itself Friday and killed a proposal to penalize buyers and manufacturers of gasoline-guzzling automobiles.

The amendment, tentatively approved on an 8-4 vote on Thursday, was defeated Friday 10 to 7, after five senators who missed the first roll call voted.

However, Chairman Russell Long indicated a less-restrictive measure to discourage wasting gasoline will be adopted before the committee completes work on a major energy-tax bill.

Under the Ribicoff proposal, new American cars would have to meet gradually rising efficiency standards. The buyer and the manufacturer of a car that fell below the standards would be penalized.

For example, a buyer of a 1980-model car that could travel less than 13 miles per gallon would have to pay a $1,400 tax. The manufacturer of that car would have to pay $200 for each mile per gallon that every car in his fleet fell below the standard, which in 1980 would be 20 miles per gallon.

The committee also had voted 7 to 5 on Thursday to require that a percentage of the parts in any foreign car imported into the United States be American-made.

This proposal, aimed at protecting U.S. auto workers from foreign competition, failed 9 to 8 after the five absentees voted.

New oil plan may delay gas price hikes

By CLARK HOYT Knight News Service WASHINGTON

— In yet another bid for compromise with Congress, President Ford Friday offered to phase out oil price controls under a new plan that actually might cut gasoline prices this year and would delay sharp increases until after the 1978 election.

White House officials characterized the plan as Ford's final offer in his struggle with the Democrats who control the House and Senate.

The complicated proposal, the fourth that Ford has trotted out since the beginning of the year, was quickly turned down by key congressional leaders, including Sens. Edward M. Kennedy D-Mass. and Henry M. Jackson D-Wash. and House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill D-Mass.

O'NEILL predicted that Congress will kill the new Ford plan next week but will be unable to override a promised veto on its own legislation extending the present oil price controls system for six months.

The result of such an impasse — barring last-minute agreement on some brief, temporary extension — would be instant decontrol after Aug. 31, when the current controls authority expires.

Neither side professes to want that outcome, which could mean overnight gasoline price hikes of from 5 to 15 cents a gallon. But White House officials have been saying that Ford would prefer immediate decontrol to continuing a controls system.

Messengers held in theft

CHICAGO (UPI) — Two messengers for Puroator Security Inc. were arrested and charged with bank larceny Friday in the theft of $150,000 from the firm July 11, the FBI announced.

About $70,000 of the money was recovered.

The two guards were identified as Edward V. Howard Jr., 30, of Chicago, and Irvin L. Berndt, 27, of Park Forest.

which he believes is discouraging development of vitally needed domestic oil supplies.

"THIS NATION desperately needs cooperation, not confrontation, on the critical energy issue," said Ford, urging Congress not to reject his newest effort to compromise.

Reading a prepared statement before television cameras in the White House briefing room, the President said, "This plan is a critical first step in reversing our growing dependence on foreign oil. Combined with a 'windfall profits' tax on all companies and rebates of energy taxes to the American people, this plan will not hinder our economic recovery nor raise prices during 1975."

"It will not allow unfair gains or produce undue hardships," Ford maintained.

BUT influential Democrats, including seven of them at one press conference, denounced the Ford plan, charging that it would raise prices, cost Americans jobs and fatten oil company profits while failing to increase production and energy conservation.

Jackson, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, called the Ford proposal "extortion" and "an attempted fraud on the American consumer."

Rep. Bob Eckhardt D-Tex., charged that Ford was "creating a grand hoax."

The Democrats contended that, if higher oil prices really were necessary, Ford could raise them now under the existing controls legislation. The law allows increases which the government can justify as necessary to stimulate greater petroleum production.

Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb has conceded that the higher prices contemplated by Ford — from the present $5.25-a-barrel for controlled "old oil" to an eventual $13.40 by 1978 — cannot be supported solely on the grounds that they are needed to spur production. Ford also regards increased prices as a way to discourage Americans from the wasteful use of energy.

Zarb said he also gave a commitment to Congress months ago not to impose unilateral price increases while the administration was trying to work out an energy compromise with

Capitol Hill. The newest Ford plan, worked out in a meeting between Zarb and a group of House Democrats, is a modification of a proposal rejected by Congress this week.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Retribution characterizes your year's experience. Your actions are guided by your subconscious and have lasting results. If you're on the right track, you have a long period of selling or presenting almost anything with immediate success. Relationships deepen and provide security. Today's natives adopt fields of study in which basic facts are elusive or hard to deal with.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Let others rush around. Get extra rest or indulge in neglected, quiet pastimes. You have the needs of your family to consider.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You can formulate plans as you encounter those who qualify to help. Don't push; the finer details that interest you most require careful work to turn out right.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Put in a public appearance to fulfill your obligation in local observances. Then, catch up with paperwork for the coming week so you know where you stand.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Long-standing questions are close to being answered this Sunday. Help matters along and stay alert to enjoy agreements made and options presented.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): There's no glory to be gained, but you must make the rounds among friends today. You find out what special changes should be made through conversation. Enlist cooperation; set up appointments.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Issues that were at a stalemate are resolved rather easily. Accept basic details, then build on them. You begin a long, upward move and have no reason to hold onto the past.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow the course of least resistance. You'll be pressed into service to supplement or replace someone long on the job. Use any shortcuts you have.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Just because others are serious doesn't mean they disapprove. Be pleasant without clowning. Older people's problems are close to being solved, so don't rush them.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Candid discussion clears the air and generates general understanding on coming events and the financial situation. You can save a great deal by trying not to duplicate your actions.

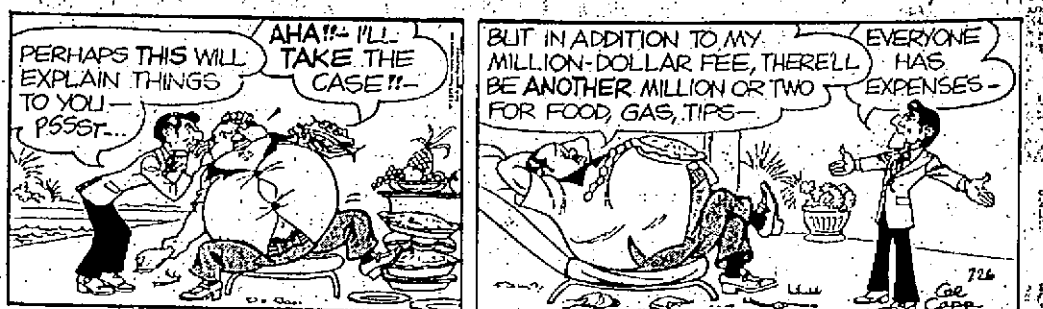

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There is too much going on to fit into a single day. Select one or two issues to explore fully and according to plan. Let others carry the show this evening.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Nostalgia is in the air. Skeletons in your family closet become legends after a long enough time. You needn't be sensitive; today's comments lack malice.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Be ready to share space or to take yourself out of the crowds. Enjoy your immediate environment. Youngsters complicate the scene but highlight your day.

GARDENING

Lots of water needed

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Gardener may find an answer to the following plants discussed, when seeking some that tolerate lots of water, and grown in sun or half sun.

Cyperus papyrus, antiquorum, the Egyptian paper plant, is a sedge that likes lots of moisture. It is the plant from which Egyptians made the paper. The three angled stems grow from four to eight feet tall, topped with long drooping thread-like rays. The plants provide an ornamental appearance.

Cyperus alternifolius grows from two to four feet tall, with stems topped by umbrella-shaped clusters of leaves from which flower spikelets appear. The third is a smaller-growing variety, the C. esculentus.

Equisetum pratense, "horsetail," is a rush-like plant with upright leafless stems two to three feet tall and is a moisture lover.

All these plants are invasive, so must be kept within bounds.

DEVIL grass (bermuda) growing in ivy or other leafy ground covers (except ice plant family) can be controlled.

There is a blade weed herbicide that kills the grass weeds and also can be used on devil grass as well as other types of blade weeds growing in a dichondra lawn.

About half of the gardeners that have used such a herbicide don't think it is any good because the herbicide didn't kill back the blade weeds or the devil grass growing in a dichondra lawn.

We believe those gardeners didn't properly apply the material. It is tricky to apply. Such an herbicide is not saturated over the weeds and into the soil. It must not be sprayed with a tank sprayer, or a hose spray gun whether an insecticide type or a fertilizer type.

The spray gun must throw out a very fine mist only. There are several such brands of mist sprayers available. The herbicide properly should make it look as if there is a morning dew left on the leaf blades. The final important factor for effective control is to add a wetting agent to the herbicide-water mixture. The wetting agent causes the residue to still cling to the leaves after the moisture had dried. The herbicide is absorbed internally by the young growth, and carried into the whole weed plant system which causes the weed to die.

It is important that the dichondra lawn should not be moved before spraying. In fact, the lawn should not be mowed for several weeks in order to have more new growth area for the herbicide to work on.

One application of the herbicide spray may not be enough. Read the directions for repeat sprayings.

Lawn should be mowed higher in hot weather, the height at least an inch and a half for dichondra, and two inches for blade lawn. Recommendation for hybrid bermuda is to mow it as low as three-eighths of an inch.

MOST pro-gardeners favor a reel-type power mower, fewer use a rotary-type.

A neighbor who let the lawns grow high, and not watered for weeks had a pro-gardener mow both the front and rear lawns. The gardener could not have used a reel mower because the weeds were too high. The rotary mower chopping action chops off the weeds and lawn grass. Despite the hood cover over the choppers, the rotary wind action caused the dry soil areas to blow away from that mower and swirl into the air as though a wind storm was blowing.

The wind blowing in one direction caused all the dust to cover the next door neighbor's house on three sides, the front and back porches, also into the screened back porch, all the walks and driveways.

The offended neighbor had to wash all the walks, driveway, porches, and sprinkle the lawn to wash down the dust! What do you think the offended neighbor thought about that problem?

If only those pasture-like lawns had been watered well in advance of mowing.

Jobs for gardeners

Trees in lawns need deep periodic waterings for sturdy growth. Mature trees (five years and older) should be watered from four to five feet deep.

Plant Gloriosa, daisies for lots of yellow, orange and bronze color in a sunny area. Space the plants 18 inches apart and plant a group of 10 or more. Flowers are good for indoor decoration, too.

Leaf-cutting bees chew out perfect half circle portions off certain plants foliage. They use the leafage for lining their nests. It is difficult to control them because they don't return to the same plants.

Pearl slugs skeletonize the leaves of flowering and fruiting plum trees. A flying insect lays eggs on the foliage. The eggs hatch into the chewing larvae. They look somewhat like a slug. Gardener can either spray with stomach type spray or throw fine soil dust over them.

People and ideas Virtues of hypocrisy

"I never go to church because churches are full of hypocrites," said a young woman who is hostile to religion.

She unwittingly paid churches a high compliment.

Of course churches are full of hypocrites. They should be. Churches exist to serve hypocrites. If any human beings ever achieve true sainthood, they don't need churches.

And all other establishments that add dignity to life are full of hypocrisy.

Hypocrisy is defined as "the act or practice of pretending to be what one is not."

TO UNDERSTAND hypocrisy, be a nudist. Stand naked in front of a full-length mirror. You may like what you see. You may be one of the rare ones who has the radiant figure of a Greek god or goddess. Or you may wish — most people do — that a few modifications could be made.

But naked in front of the mirror, you cannot be hypocrite. Like it or not, you are you.

When you start putting on clothes you become a hypocrite.

If a man puts on soiled dungarees, he is a laborer. If he puts on a judge's robe, he is a judge. If he puts on a Marine's uniform he is "Semper Paratus" and ready to storm the beach head.

If a woman puts on a bikini, she is a sexpot. If she puts on a Paris evening gown and $10,000 worth of gems, she is a darling of high society. If she puts on a nun's habit, she is a nun.

Of course, all this is hypocrisy. The Marine may be something less than faithful and a despicable coward. The nun may feel a twinge of envy for the lady with the jewels or even for the girl in the bikini. The judge may have a marred philosophy about justice.

We are all human, and underneath our clothes we are stark naked.

BUT PRETENSE is important. When we put on "our Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes" and go to church we are making an assertion. True, we are stained with the Seven Deadly Sins — all of us are in one way or another. But in church we recognize that there could and should be a better way of life. If we hypocrites didn't believe this, we wouldn't go to church.

Hypocrites do rub off on our souls. The disloyal, cowardly Marine must walk and talk like a Marine as long as he wears the uniform. It may come to pass that he may on some flaming beach head go beyond the call of duty — and far beyond his marred character.

ALYES, hypocrisy is essential — and the beginning of wisdom.

The philosopher Hobbes observed that the life of man is "nasty, brutish and short." Unless it is disciplined by religion and good social order.

It is important to wear the proper protective coloration and go through the motions. So you cannot pray? At least you can kneel or bow your head. It will not do your stiff-necked arrogance any harm — and you may, in spite of yourself, be surprised by joy. A hypocrite in church is playing with heavenly fire.

HYPOCRISY, like any other virtue, can become a vice if practiced to excess. We have all known steel-hearted churchmen with the instincts of bandits — and ladies of much proclaimed chastity who have the souls of whores. The worst kind of whores.

But for most people a measure of hypocrisy is good. It is good to try to appear better than we actually are. It is good to be polite to those we despise. It is good to square our shoulders and walk tall when we are struggling with despair.

It is good to wear clothes to hide our blemishes. Or even to hide the perfection of Greek deities from the eyes of the profane.

Fellow hypocrites, it is time for hymns and prayers.

DON'T RETIRE FROM CHURCH

As one grows older he has to give up many things. At a fairly youthful age a man gives up football and dancing half the night. There comes a time when he retires or is retired from work.

So much disappears. The old familiar faces are fewer each year. The elderly tend to withdraw even from activities they can still enjoy. They live more and more within themselves and their memories.

This narrowing of life should be resisted.

One way to resist it is to go to church.

There should be no alibis. "So one's rheumatism is acting up? It will be no worse in a pew. So one's clothes are old-fashioned and a bit frayed? Who cares? So one has no money for the collection plate? God's House is not a commercial business. One has no transportation? Many churches have bus services.

In church the elderly are always welcome. Old and young mingle together. Old folks need contact with kids — and the young need the old.

It is good at any age to stretch one's mind with Truth. It is better to think about ultimate things than to grovel in self-pity because of loneliness, pain and poverty.

People give up what they have to give up. They never have to give up love of God, of their neighbors and of their own self-respect. Church is a way to keep these greatest of loves.

See you in church, old-timer!

Councilman knows his Quakers 'Tribe' did good — well!

By MARK CLUTTER

"We came to America to do good. Instead, we did well," said a Quaker in a cynical mood.

They have done good and they have done well and many have done both good and well, says William F. Mendenhall, dean of the Signal Hill City Council and a life-long student of the Society of Friends in America.

For more than 20 years he has made an avocation of Quaker history and genealogy. He has more than 250 books. He writes articles for historical societies and Quaker publications.

"The Quakers are almost a tribe," he said. "The same family names are found again and again."

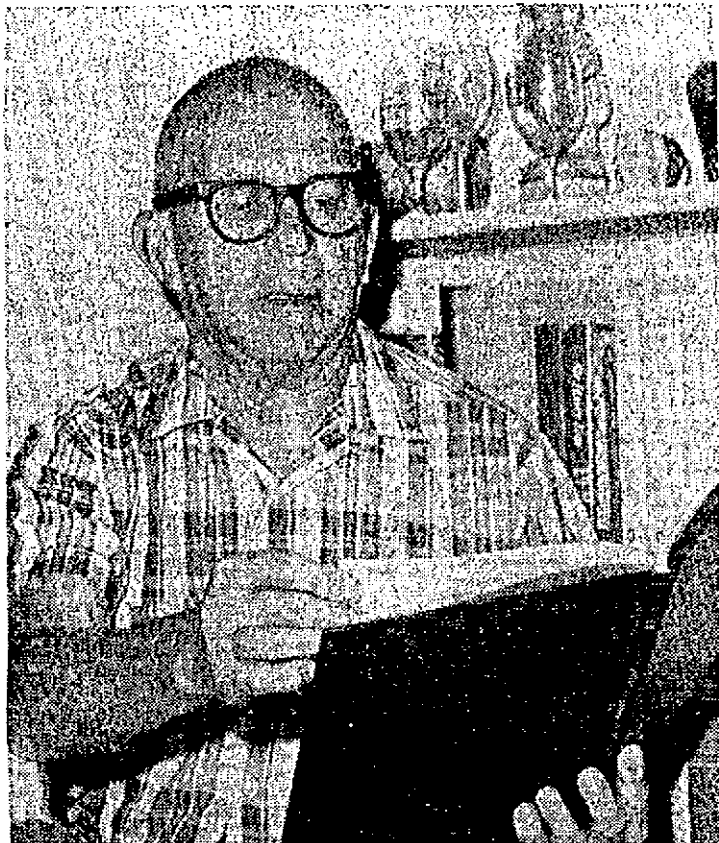

For example, another William Mendenhall was president of Friends University in Wichita and Whitier College. "He was a kind of fourth cousin of mine," Mendenhall said.

Some of the common Quaker names are Mendenhall, Cope, Macy (founder of the department stores), Stanley, Manlove, Hussey, Folger, Elyson, Crew, Beals, Barnard, Coffin, Kimball, Cannon, Starbuck.

MOST PEOPLE think that Quaker is a synonym for pacifist. This is generally true, but not always.

"I served in the Army in World War II," Mendenhall said. "I felt it was my duty. We military Quakers think of ourselves as defenders, not warriors. There have been two prominent Quaker generals. Smedley Butler was commandant of the Marine Corps earlier in this century. Nathaniel Greene was a Revolutionary War general.

"Quakers were active in the Underground Railway of pre-Civil War days. They stole slaves from the South and helped them to escape to Canada."

HISTORIAN WILLIAM MENDENHALL

Most Quakers, however, are pacifists. Many in wartime have either sought noncombatant duty or have flatly refused to serve. Some did time in federal prisons for their beliefs.

In England in World War I Quakers were executed until the English became ashamed of themselves.

A little known chapter of Quaker history is that of the "Norwegian Mayflower." Some Norwegian seamen became prisoners of war in England during the Napoleonic Wars. There they met Quakers and became converts.

When they returned to Norway they found that the kingdom was unfriendly to Friends. So they and their families boarded a small ship and sailed to America.

MOST of the Quakers live in the United States. At the last count there were 126,902, Mendenhall said. There are about 25,000 in Britain and Ireland. In the world they number slightly more than 200,000.

"Quakers have a way of becoming wealthy," Mendenhall said. "They are mostly honest, hard-working people of moderate habits."

"And Quakers are in one respect like Jews. We believe in education. We believe in learning and wisdom. Most Quaker families urge their children to go to college."

"And that's why so many Quakers are successful in the professions and in business."

George Fox founded the Society of Friends in England in the 17th century. It was a "left wing" group of the Puritan movement. Tension and persecution were so great that many fled to America, where they also encountered persecution.

QUAKERS do not believe in sacraments. Many churches today have ministers, but the ministers would not like being called clergymen.

The traditional service was the silent meeting in an extremely plain meeting house. The people kept silent until the Spirit moved them to speak. Today the services are more like that of other Protestants, but there is usually the period of silence.

The heart of Quaker belief is the Inner Voice — God speaking through the

Tell us about Vietnam friends

Many churches are helping in various ways the refugees from Vietnam. Some churches have adopted families. Others provide church services, social events or counseling.

We would like to hear what churches — or individuals — are doing for these people who are suffering the emotional trauma of having to adjust to a new and very different world.

Just send to us brief, preferably typewritten, statements about friends from Vietnam, what their problems are and how you are helping.

More people, we feel sure, would like to help Vietnamese in America — if they knew how to go about it. Let's hear your ideas.

Editor tells views on religion news

Some views on religion as news were expressed by Dan Thrapp, religion editor of the Los Angeles Times for 25 years, at his recent retirement.

We quote from the article:

"... religion is very basic to the human spirit, as fundamental an urge as sex or intellectuality or combativeness."

"Religion is not the easiest field to cover, we think."

"It does not come with built-in blockbusters that erupt occasionally in such areas as science, medicine, space, politics — you name it. About the only religion story that would make the front page of many journals — on its news value alone — is the Second Coming, and even it might have tough going here and there."

"But the fact that religion is rarely sensational does not suggest that it is rarely important, for on any scale of values it must rank with any area of human concern and ahead of most."

"Being convinced at the outset of the significance of the field, and probing into its exciting corners wherever we could, our appreciation of it, and respect for religion and its honest practitioners has deepened and grown steadily for all of these years. We have never been bored or disillusioned, at least with the field as a whole."

Since the Quakers are a rather formless denomination, they vary greatly from church to church, Mendenhall said. The Quakers are ruled by Monthly and Yearly Meetings. "Rule" may not be the right word because each person is accountable to his own conscience.

Few Friends today wear broad-brimmed hats and gray clothes. Nor do they talk with "thee and thou." But they are cognizant of their heritage.

Mendenhall, in spite of his fascination with Quaker history, feels that he is not really in good stand-

MSGR. KENNEDY

Monsignor to retire

The Rev. Msgr. Thomas Francis Kennedy, first pastor of St. Bartholomew Roman Catholic Church, 5143 Livingston Drive, will retire on Friday. He will be pastor emeritus.

He was appointed as pastor in April, 1937. The first Mass was held in May in the Belmont Theatre. The church and school were built under his leadership.

Msgr. Kennedy, a native of New York City, was educated in Ireland. His first priestly assignment was with Immaculate Conception Church in Los Angeles. His first pastorate was St. Rose of Lima, Chula Vista, in 1930. Two years later he was appointed pastor of Nativity Church, Torrance.

In retirement he will live in the Long Beach area.

After all, he followed his conscience and bore arms.

He is definitely the senior in Signal Hill city government. He became a councilman in 1962. He has been mayor twice and mayor pro tem five times.

Two things must never leave thee, kindness and loyalty; be these the seals that hang about your neck, graven by this inscription with thy heart for tablet; so both to God and man thou shalt be friend and confidant. — Prov. 3: 3.

Messiah Jesus

Religion Editor:

I'd like to respond to the question of whether Jewish people are looking for the person of Messiah. I can only answer this from my own experience as a young Jewess.

I was brought up in a Jewish home and attended first a Conservative, and then a Reform temple. I was confirmed in the faith by my own choice when I was in the 10th grade.

In 1968 tragedy struck my home and my 22 year old brother Louis was shot and killed in our home in Lakewood. Six months later my mom died of the cancer that had been ravaging her body for a year and a half. I had never really thought of what came after death, but now I was confronted with the loss of two very close people to me. I remember asking our rabbi what we as Jews believed and he answered that my mother and Louis had touched our lives deeply and because we were still alive, a little of them lived on in us. I thought that was a very poetic concept, but it didn't do a thing for the ache in my heart or the horrible void their death had left in my life.

About six months after my mother's death I moved out of my parents' home. The next few years I worked, and tried to escape reality and myself as much as possible. I experimented with drugs, and thought of myself as a "free-thinker." God was very far from my thoughts. Then I started dating my husband Michael, and we started having philosophical discussions on the possible existence of a personal relationship to the God of this universe.

Michael's mother was the first one to ever tell me that Jesus Christ was Messiah that my people had waited centuries for. She told also that there were over 300 prophecies concerning his first coming in the Old Testament. Such as Micah 5 where Messiah would be born: "But thou Bethlehem Ephrathah though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting."

And Psalm 22 that depicts the suffering Messiah—especially verse 16: "For dogs have compassed me; the assembly of the wicked have enclosed me; they pierced my hands and my feet."

I remember just listening politely, after all this was Michael's mother. Meanwhile God had given her a love and a burden for me, and she was praying that a younger person who I would better relate to would speak to me regarding the claims of Jesus.

Then in January of 1972 Michael and I met a young potter at an art show. He was so full of life and seemed to love what he was doing. Both of us were very impressed with him, probably because neither of us were very happy with what we were doing with our lives. I told him it was very refreshing to see someone enjoy their job so much. He looked me right in the eye and said, "It's not the pottery I make, it's what is inside them." I looked inside, and there was a Bible tract lying there. I felt then that this young man knew something that I didn't. He invited us to a potluck dinner he and his wife were having. Michael and I went, and there were about 30 young people there. After dinner they started to sing Christian songs. Then individually they started to pray for each other's needs, and for mutual friends and family. I had never seen people sincerely worshipping God like that before. It made me feel both uncomfortable, and desirous at the same time. I could actually feel the presence of God in that room.

That night I met Jesus the Messiah. Yeshua Hamishiah is His name in Hebrew. The following day Michael also accepted Him into his heart. Our lives have been wonderfully and dramatically changed since that day, much to the amazement of our family and friends.

I know that Jesus Christ is the Messiah of the Jews and the Gentiles, and it is my prayer that my Jewish brethren might come to know him personally as I have. I would be happy to talk or write to anyone who is interested in coming to know the Messiah Jesus.

An error

Religion Editor:

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is still lobbying against the legalized consenting adults' "sex law," but it must be all right because apparently the church does pay taxes on all its very profitable properties and church-owned businesses. That is, according to all the thoughtful people who called my home from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m.

And to all those good Christian people who thought to call me—even those who called me "a degenerate," "a trouble maker," even "papist," go my sincerest apologies for this error on my part.

Now that I know the LDS Church pays taxes like almost everybody else, I know I will sleep securely at night assured that the members of the Mormon Church don't discriminate against others unjustifiably.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Put romance into life

An interesting story is told about Ramsay MacDonald, one-time prime minister of England. He suffered a sad loss when his wife died early in life leaving their children for MacDonald to bring up. Her last words to her husband were wise indeed: "Put romance into the lives of our children."

It was a curious last admonition. But certainly, the capacity for romance is one of the most important legacies she could have left her children. Because if a young person becomes responsive to the wonder and glory which is in every aspect of life, it will lift him out of himself, and make him a dynamic part of a wonderful world. The romance element will sustain him and keep him going with zest and enthusiasm, no matter what.

My own mother taught her children to live with romance. One thing I remember about her was that: whenever her children complained, she would say, "You must learn to love life. You're living in a beautiful world; see as much of it as you can. Love the world and make the most of every minute of your life." One of her favorite phrases was, "always keep your soul open to the beauty of the world." In later years I was grateful to my mother for giving me such an exciting and romantic attitude toward life.

My son John graduated at Deerfield Academy and I came to know the late Dr. Frank Boyden, its headmaster, very well indeed. He was a rare soul, one of the greatest educators of boys America ever had. Most every evening he concluded his announcements to the 500 boys in the big dining hall by saying, "As you go out, take a look at the hills." Misty-eyed old Deerfield boys will tell you that they found new beauty in the Massachusetts hills at twilight from a sensitive teacher who was trying to put romance into their lives. He knew they would need some wonder and glory in their hearts for the long, and often hard, pull across the years.

The Creator must have meant us to be sensitive to the world about us, else why would He have filled it with such charm and beauty? We are supposed to be alive, wholly alive to the tips of our fingers! Almighty God, who breathed into us the breath of life, surely intends us to get outside ourselves and enter into human relationships and activity with appreciation, with eagerness and enthusiasm.

Once on a speaking engagement in Fargo, N.D., I was scheduled to make a speech the next night in Duluth, Minnesota. "Go by air," a friend advised, "By plane you can be in Duluth in an hour."

"Isn't there anything to see between Fargo and Duluth?" I asked.

"No," he answered, "not much. Only a bunch of lakes."

Well, I'd never been through that particular area and decided to drive so as to see those lakes. And I'm glad I did. For what I saw and felt added to the romance of living for me. I started out early on a beautiful morning. Spring hadn't quite come yet, but there was already an unmistakable trace of it in the air and on the land. And I've never seen so many lakes and of such depth of color. I began to understand why they call this part of the country, "The land of the sky-blue water."

Circling the lakes were tall pine trees — and poplar and birch and aspen. Above, was a clear, blue sky with patches of fleecy clouds — sometimes these clouds were reflected in the green-blue lakes, as in a painting.

Adventure of love

Hooky is worth-while

By MARK CLUTTER

Churches are like spouses. You might as well stick with the one you have because any replacement would have flaws too.

But loyalty doesn't mean that there is no one else in the world. It is good to go out and get acquainted with people.

Last Sunday my spouse, Dale, and I played hooky and went to St. John's Episcopal Church, 514 W. Adams Blvd., Los Angeles, just off the Harbor Freeway.

I recommend that everybody — Mormon, Moslem, Christian Scientist, atheist, Communist, hard-shelled Baptist, Women's Libber or art lover — should go to St. John's at least once. The principal service is at 10 a.m. on Sunday.

AND WHAT'S so wonderful about this church? Why not go to the church in the next block if one happens to be in a pious mood?

The question is hard to answer because there are several answers. It is historic, filled with memories of Los Angeles and the Southland. It is an artistic masterpiece. It is Anglican, conscious of going back to St. Augustine, the first Bishop of Canterbury. It has a memory of aristocracy, but it is common people. Many of the people are dark-skinned Church-of-England immigrants from the former British colonies of the Caribbean. The church has millions of dollars in art treasures — but its chief treasure is love.

LOVE is in the air at St. John's. You breathe that fragrance when you step through the 11th century doorway. You see it in the eyes of the people.

The Catholic and Anglican churches have revived a custom that probably goes back to the Apostles. It is called the Kiss of Peace. People are asked to greet friend and stranger.

Blue-eyed people find this hard to do. To touch hands is a duty, to embrace or kiss impossible. But not at St. John's. They go up and down the aisles clasping hands, embracing, often kissing. The blue eyes have got the message.

I thought of the Roman philosopher who remarked, "How much these Christians love each other!"

THE SERVICE was both "High Church" and popular. The choir is talented and highly trained, but they sang hymns requested by the congregation. A tambourine and a vocalist provided music at Communion. The "Bread of Heaven," the "Cup of Salvation" were served at a common table. Here the sense of love, of total caring, was especially strong. (Anyone who calls himself a Christian may take Communion.)

St. John's has a romantic and for these parts a rather long history. The parish was founded in 1890. The present church, however, was built in 1925. It is a reproduction of an 11th century church in Toscanella, Italy. Unlike the stone original, it is built of concrete and steel. The earthquake of 1933 did no damage. The people say it is the safest place to be in an earthquake.

In 1925 St. John's was a parish of millionaires who vied with each other to contribute art treasures to the church. The art comes from many parts of the world. There are German, Scandinavian, Italian and Greek influences. The Lady Chapel in Byzantine mosaic is breath-taking. The art of St. John's is famous in art circles throughout the world.

THERE ARE probably no millionaires in St. John's now. The "founding fathers" and their heirs have all departed to death or the suburbs. But the black and the brown and the white — the real heirs — love their beautiful church.

And what is more important, they love each other. There are probably things wrong with St. John's — there are always things wrong with anything human — but to the casual visitor, the hooky player, it is an enriching experience.

And to an art student it could be a place for many months of study.

It is, of course, rivaled by St. Vincent's, the much larger Roman Catholic church, across the street. St. Vincent's, built also in 1925, is one of the great churches in the baroque style.

Don't try to see both churches on the same day. Art should be taken in smaller rations.

IT'S UP TO YOU...

God has created me to do Him some definite service; He has committed some work to me which He has not committed to another. I have my mission...

I am a link in a chain, a bond of connection between persons.

He has not created me for naught. I shall do good. I shall do his work.

I shall be an angel of peace, a preacher of truth in my own place while not intending it — if I do not keep His commandments.

Therefore I will trust Him.

Whatever, wherever I am, I can never be thrown away.

If I am in sickness, my sickness may serve Him;

in perplexity, my perplexity may serve Him;

if I am in sorrow, my sorrow may serve Him.

He does nothing in vain. He knows what He is about.

30 nurses on strike fired

Thirty nurses who have been striking for 10 days at South Bay Hospital in Redondo Beach have been fired for "withholding their services" to the medical facility, a hospital administrator announced Friday.

The 30 nurses learned of the action—effective last Wednesday—when they received letters in the mail Friday.

Those terminated included 24 registered nurses, two licensed vocational nurses and four nurses' attendants. They had been suspended since last week pending an investigation of their failure to report to work as scheduled, the administrator, Jerry Greene, said.

Another three nurses were fired July 15 when they allegedly refused to take a physical examination after calling in sick.

The strike was over the nurses' fight for an election to select a bargaining representative. A spokesman for the California Nurses Association said the terminations would be challenged by the association in the courts.

Greene explained the hospital's position on the terminations:

"This action is based on the premise that any employee has the option to stay away from the job for capricious reasons, but in exercising this option he or she can expect to be replaced."

He said the nurses seeking union representation were told at a meeting of the hospital board June 25 that the legal procedures to provide for union representation would be prepared by the hospital's labor relations attorney.

Some nurses went on strike July 16, claiming the hospital was not taking steps to recognize their demand for an immediate union election.

Greene said the hospital bargaining policy draft would be presented at the board's meeting Wednesday.

The spokesman for the nurses association said the nurses planned to continue their strike while attorneys for the association determined exactly what legal action would be taken toward job reinstatement and recovering back pay.

for about a minute there," said the astronaut.

DOCTORS said, however, the astronauts reported later that only Brand had passed out.

According to the space agency transcript, Stafford is recorded as telling frogmen swimming beside the spaceship: "Get the —ing hatch open ..."

He then said "(Garble) confused (Garble) lot of trouble with (Garble)."

A few moments later he told the swimmers: "I feel great. I never had any (Garble) sort of nausea (Garble) I'm doing okay (Garble) though..."

The spacemen reported they detected a yellow gas that burned the eyes and throat.

OFFICIALS said Friday that gas apparently streamed into the spacecraft at about 23,000 feet as it fell toward the ocean and the end of a nine-day mission that included a linkup with a Soviet spacecraft.

Officials speculated the gas may have come from deployment of parachutes by an explosive device or from the detonation of explosive bolts that jettison a heat shield cover.

These explosions which would produce smoke and the normal byproducts of combustion occur at about 24,000 feet, when the spacecraft is beginning to pressurize by drawing in fresh air.

Dr. Donald E. Stulken, the space agency recovery team leader, said the fresh air intake could have sucked in some of the gas and smoke from the explosive devices.

THE astronauts looked haggard and tired when they crawled from the spacecraft onto the deck of this ship, but they were able to make brief remarks and to talk with President Ford.

The first told doctors of the gas problem after going below to the New Orleans' sick bay. Doctors immediately sent them to bed.

Proposed job cuts protested

ARROYO GRANDE (AP) — Twenty pickets marched Friday at the San Luis Obispo court-house to protest proposed budget cuts of $3½ million that may cost 175 county jobs.

The demonstrators' signs included one saying, "The sheriff's are gone, lock your door," a reference to tentative plans to cut 20 deputies from the county payroll.

Kantaeng trial jury selected

By TOM WILLMAN Staff Writer

A 10-man, two-woman jury was empaneled Friday in Norwalk Superior Court to try the controversial case of a 19-year-old Long Beach woman, accused of murdering a man who allegedly had raped her.

The trial of Deborah Joy Kantaeng will begin at 9 a.m. Monday with attorneys' opening arguments before Judge Beach Vasey.

Miss Kantaeng is charged with the Oct. 3, 1974, shotgun slaying of Danny Charles Allen, a 21-year-old Santa Ana man who allegedly came to her North Long Beach duplex home the day after he had kidnapped and raped her.

In tape-recorded interviews with homicide investigators—which Vasey will allow to be used as prosecution evidence—the young defendant allegedly described her abduction and confessed to shooting Allen when she saw him stride through the front door of her home.

The trial, originally set to begin in Long Beach last January, has repeatedly been delayed. The first delay came Jan. 13 when defense attorney David Fishman reported Miss Kantaeng had been injured in an auto accident.

In April, the case again came before the court—but for transfer to another jurisdiction. Long Beach judges allowed the change of venue to Norwalk on grounds the trial's estimated length of at least four weeks would overburden Long Beach's congested court calendar.

The case came to trial last month before Vasey in Norwalk, but after one day of jury selection, Miss Kantaeng's father was found dead in a Long Beach motel room. Vasey declared a mistrial.

The father, 45-year-old

Robert Boyd, was to have been a crucial witness at the trial. Homicide investigators said Boyd apparently committed suicide, leaving a note that only named a son as his heir.

Each attempt to start the trial was closely followed by the media, which had reported the case from the beginning.

The killing of Danny Allen and revelation of details in the case coincided with public debates about the treatment of rape victims—and it came on the heels of the trial of a Soledad woman, who also admitted killing a rapist.

Inez Garcia, 30, was convicted of second degree murder in that case, just two days after the arrest of Miss Kantaeng. Miss Garcia subsequently was sentenced to a term of five years-to-life in state prison.

During the abortive June attempt to pick a jury in the Kantaeng case, the judge and attorneys were cautious over the issue of media exposure.

Last week, however, Vasey began the jury selection by noting the case had received publicity.

He gave prospective jurors an outline of facts and allegations in the case, then questioned each about whether they'd heard of it and how much they recalled.

The panelists also were questioned closely by attorneys on both side about their feelings on the issue of rape.

As finally empaneled, members of the 10-man, two-woman jury range in age from 19—a Long Beach State University student—to retirement age in several cases.

The two women on the jury are married and retired. Two of the four alternates are women.

U.S. BASES

the American decision" would determine the Turkish attitude. It is generally believed here that much milder action would have been taken against the American bases in case of a favorable House vote.

The bill rejected by the House called for the delivery of $185 million worth of weapons to Turkey. Part of the sum had already been paid by Turkey.

Kissinger, at a Washington news conference, called the House vote "a tragic evolution" and an unfortunate decision for Turkey and Greece and for prospects for a settlement on Cyprus.

Ford had led a high-powered campaign to resume some of the arms deliveries. Immediately after the vote, Ford said the House action "can only do the most serious and irreparable damage to the vital national security interest of the United States."

A complete list of the U.S. installations was not available because of security directives but only four bases were considered to be major facilities. They are Incirlik and three intelligence-gathering units at Karamursel south of Istanbul, Sincop on the Black Sea coast and Pirinlik in the southeast.

Informed sources say Pirinlik has a unique capacity for gathering intelligence from the Soviet Union.

The rest of the installations form a network of radar listening stations.

They are known to be at Izmir on the Aegean coast, Gemlik beside the Marmara Sea, Malatya and Erzurum in the east, Samsun on the Black Sea, Gelibolu on the Dardanelles, three near Ankara, one each at Balikesir and Askihesir in the northwest, and two at Adana near Incirlik.

GRAIN SALE

to conserve supplies. But grain firms have been asked — and have agreed — to report large export sales before negotiations begin.

The request, made to the companies earlier this week, was "not in any way a form of export control" nor was it a return to a system used last year in which firms had to get prior USDA approval before clinching large foreign sales.

Bell said he did not expect further large U.S. grain sales to the Soviets until USDA issues new estimates on Aug. 11 which will show how much American farmers are expected to harvest.

"We have made it plain to the foreign buyers that we would not like to see any large sales until we've seen the August report," Bell said.

Just a prankster, Segretti tells bar

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Political trickster Donald H. Segretti says the California Supreme Court should not disbar him because moral turpitude was not involved in the crimes he admittedly committed during the Watergate affair.

In a reply brief filed with the court Friday, the 33-year-old attorney argued that if the court did decide that his guilty pleas on three misdemeanor counts involved moral turpitude, he should be suspended from practicing law rather than disbarred.

Segretti, who pleaded guilty in federal court to conspiracy to distribute and distributing unsigned campaign literature in an effort to disrupt the 1972 Democratic presidential primary in Florida, served a six-month jail term.

The state bar's disciplinary board ruled that the crimes involved moral turpitude, but board members split on whether Segretti should be disbarred or suspended.

Segretti, who has voluntarily refrained from practicing law since June 1972, asked the high court to review the matter, and arguments were heard in Los Angeles last month.

In his brief, Segretti said the violations he admitted did not "per se" indicate he had committed acts involving moral turpitude. He said he was hired by former President Nixon's administration to do things "similar to college pranks at USC (where he got his law degree)."

He said he collaborated in putting stink bombs at a campaign office of Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and sending a letter on Muskie's stationery accusing Sens. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., of sexual improprieties.

He said he put out a flyer advertising a free "all you can eat" lunch at Humphrey's campaign headquarters in Milwaukee in April 1972, when no such party was scheduled. "The court is asked to look at Mr. Segretti's entire life and try to understand that what he did was a product of his being thrown into a new situation without the experience to handle it," the brief said.

Ex-official guilty of tot selling

Associated Press

Ronald R. Silverton, a former Los Angeles County crime commissioner, was convicted Friday on charges stemming from a black market baby selling operation that allegedly sold infants for as much as $10,000.

Silverton, 42, said after the verdict that his actions were "in the forefront of social change" and were "legal, moral and proper."

Superior Court Judge Thomas T. Johnson found Silverton guilty of conspiracy to place a newspaper advertisement seeking children for adoption and of operating an unlicensed homefinding agency. Sentencing was set for Oct. 3.

Prosecutors said Silverton "sold babies for as much as $10,000 as part of a multimillion-dollar international black market adoption scheme."

Silverton, a disbarred lawyer, said his "Save-A-Life Adoption Service" gave women an "alternative to abortion" and united unwed mothers with prospective parents.

Drowning victim

SUSANVILLE (AP) — Divers recovered the body Friday of an 18-year-old San Francisco man who drowned in a wilderness lake in Lassen Volcanic National Park. Sheriff's deputies said James N. Abendut drowned Thursday morning while diving in Juniper Lake with his brother.

midnight. They had participated in activities at an acting school earlier in the evening.

A short time earlier, Gloria Witte, 57, wife of Lockheed Aircraft Corp. executive Roland Witte, was killed by two shotgun blasts after she tried to escape three masked men who ambushed her, her husband and another couple after the two couples returned home from dining out.

Miss Colby had recently completed filming three episodes of the new "Phyllis" television series for CBS. Kiernan is to appear in an episode of CBS' "Rhoda" show. Miss Colby's first "Phyllis" appearance is scheduled to air Sept. 8, but it was not known when Kiernan's sequence would run.

The Wittes and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hudson had just been dropped off at Hudson's $100,000 home by another couple when three masked men lunged from bushes and ordered the four to lie face down. Mrs. Witte ran but tripped and fell. A shotgun-wielding assailant fired seven or eight times, striking her twice. The bandits stripped the other three persons of their valuables and fled in a yellow van.

"She was just executed," Police Sgt. Raymond Champagne said of Mrs. Witte. Twenty minutes earlier, two other couples were accosted about five miles away in front of a home, ordered inside and robbed. No shots were fired.

Twenty minutes after that, Kiernan and Miss Colby were shot to death. Robbery may not have been the motive in their killings, authorities said.

Investigators said they felt the three episodes, and perhaps two other robberies since Wednesday, were the work of the same people.

Kallestad said officers had been investigating a residential robbery two days earlier in which a yellow van was used. Police obtained the license number from witnesses and had staked out a building in Venice where the arrests occurred.

Then, after the death of Mrs. Witte, police learned that a similar van had been used.

Police identified the arrested men as Ray Bursey, 22; Robert Neal, 23; Daniel Williams, 19; Michael Jones, 19, and Jerome Holbert, all of Venice, and Terrence Powell, 22, of Santa Monica.

Kiernan and Miss Colby both had recently come to the West Coast after beginning their acting careers in New York. A spokesman for Mary Tyler Moore Enterprises, producers of "Phyllis" and "Rhoda," said Miss Colby's TV role as star Cloris Leachman's employer was viewed as a big breakthrough.

Kiernan toured with the stock company of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in 1972 and 1973 and appeared in the off-Broadway production of "When You Comin Back, Red Ryder?" from December 1973 to August 1974. He arrived in Los Angeles July 1 after signing up with a Beverly Hills agent.

Twins rupture Angels' ego, 12-1

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

The way Rod Carew hits you might expect his teammates to address him reverently as Sir. Or at the very least, Mister.

As of Friday, Captain Carew will do nicely.

For the first time in the history of the Minnesota Twins, they have a team captain and it's none other than Rodney Cline Carew.

Carew, the three-time defending American League batting champion who is well on his way to a fourth successive silver bat, was appointed as the Twins' captain at, of all things, a rare morning workout ordered by manager Frank Quilici.

Quilici had his reasons for cutting short the sleep of his minions. Fourteen losses in the last 18 games being the most prominent.

When eventide finally did arrive for the Minnesota Twins, they came out looking for blood. The Angels were obliged to donate theirs.

Carew showed his appreciation in the most thoughtful way he could. He harvested a triple and three singles in five trips to lead a thunderous 19-hit Minnesota attack that left the Angels bleeding profusely about the ego, 12-1.

Carew is now hitting—and that's an understatement—a tidy .385, owns a six-game hitting streak and has hit safely in 14 of his last 24 tries.

"I'm flattered," Carew said of his new title. "It's nice to know that Frank (Quilici) has that much confidence in me. I honestly think I can help some of the younger players on this club."

"He deserves it," explained Quilici. "He's got to be our leader. I've thought about this for some time...today seemed like the Real moment."

Despite the fact that the

Angel of Day

RUDY MEOLI had two hits in 12-1 loss to Twins.

morning drill which consumed two hours was devoted entirely to fundamentals, denying Carew the opportunity to do what he likes best—swinging a bat—he was not offended.

"The way we're going, we needed it," Carew theorized.

Minnesota never really gave the Angels a chance. It was over before it started. The Twins scored three times in the first and seven more in a riotous second when they shelled starter Bill Singer and his troubled successor, Andy Hassler, for nine hits—count 'em, nine.

They had 12 runs and 15 hits by the time the sixth inning rolled around.

Given this kind of support, Bert Blyleven said thanks and tried to throw a no-hitter. He got into the sixth before Rudy Meoli, Mike Miley and Jerry Remy shattered the spell with successive singles to load the bases with none out.

Blyleven preserved his shutout by striking out the next three hitters but eventually gave up a run in the ninth on a walk, a hit batsmen and pinch-hitter Morris Nettles' run-scoring infield hit.

But Blyleven wound up with 11 strikeouts, his ninth victory and said, sheepishly, "Sure I was thinking no-hitter. It's the longest I've ever gone with one. I once went five innings before but then I got nervous."

"I got nervous again tonight."

Angel manager Dick Williams was succinct after the shellacking.

Early relay start costs Yanks world swim mark

CALI, Colombia (AP) — A premature start by Bruce Furniss in the fourth and final leg of a relay race in the World Aquatics Championships Friday night led to the disqualification of an American team that had shattered a world record.

"I blew it. I blew it. I blew it," sobbed a disconsolate Furniss, the world recordholder in the 200-meter freestyle from Santa Ana, after the announcement of the disqualification of the American team in the men's 800-meter freestyle relay.

The disqualification gave the gold medal to a West German team and overshadowed a world record performance by Birgit Treiber of East Germany in the women's 200-meter backstroke, plus the winning of second gold medals in the games by American Shirley Babashoff, Hungarian Andras Hargitay and East German's Hannelore Anke.

Earlier in the day, the United States got gold-medal performances from Janet Ely in platform diving and Gail Buzonas in synchronized swimming.

As the first full week of competition was completed, the United States continued to lead in gold medals with 10. East Germany was second with eight. The Americans have 23 medals and the East Germans 18. No other nation is close in the medal count.

The United States could have had its 11th gold medal had not the 18-year-old Furniss jumped the gun.

"Don't worry about it. Don't worry about it," Furniss' teammates kept saying. But the youngster who represents the Long Beach Swim Club didn't appear to be listening.

The Americans were clocked in a speedy 7:30.35.

Second-place West Germany was declared the victor in a time of 7:39.44, nearly six seconds slower than the world standard of 7:33.22, set by an American team in 1973. The silver went to Great Britain and the bronze medal to the Soviet Union.

Furniss, who said he was "very anxious," left the starting blocks before teammate Tim Shaw of Long Beach touched the wall.

"No one said a thing to us," said Shaw, who lost a chance at a fourth gold medal, although he can win a third tonight in the 1,500. "Why didn't they tell us right away?"

It was some five minutes after the race before the disqualification was announced.

Ron Ballatore, the American team's coach, had predicted his swimmers would break the record. He had no quarrel with the disqualification, however.

"He jumped," Ballatore said. "I saw it from the stands."

When an official from FINA, the world swimming federation, asked if he wanted to protest, Ballatore replied, "No, it was fair. He jumped and that is that. He's been in

Rose's 3-run smash rocks Dodgers' hopes

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

CINCINNATI—For just a few moments Friday evening, there was a breath of life in the Dodgers.

The Cincinnati Reds realized it.

A mammoth Riverfront Stadium crowd of 51,087 realized it.

Maybe even the Dodgers realized it.

But with one swish of the bat that breath is now a last gasp.

Pete Rose struck for a dramatic three-run homer in the seventh inning, lifting the Reds to a 6-3 victory over the Dodgers in the second game of a double-header after the Dodgers had bagged the opener, 4-3, behind Andy Messersmith.

"It was a big one," Rose said of the win in the nightcap, sounding dead serious even though the Reds still were 11½ games ahead of the Dodgers after losing the opener.

"If we'd have lost that second game they might have started thinking about a sweep," Rose said.

"But all that happened tonight was that we wasted a day. The Dodgers didn't do nuthin'. We didn't do nuthin'. That's to our advantage."

Dodger of Day

ANDY MESSERSMITH won 13th game as Dodgers split doubleheader with Reds.

His homer came off Mike Marshall, instant gratification for the 34-year-old Rose, who is well on his way to his 10th season of hitting .300 or better. Rose struck out against Marshall to end the first game with the potential tying run on base.

"He won that one, I won this one," Rose said of the confrontation.

Asked about the pitch to Rose, Marshall said, "Pete hit a good pitch."

A throwing error by Marshall set up the winning blow.

Al Downing worked six superb innings, and though he departed in the seventh with runners on first and second, no one out and a 2-0 count on the batter, he was ahead, 3-1.

Marshall took over with the 2-0 count on pinch hitter Ed Armbrister. After Armbrister fouled off a pitch trying to bunt, Sparky Anderson replaced Armbrister with another pinch hitter, Ken Griffey, who bunted safely. Marshall's throw to first earned off Dave Lopes' glove for an error. One run scored, and when Rose appeared there were runners at second and third and no one out.

"That play turned the whole game around," Rose said. "All I was trying to do was hit a fly ball to get the tying run home and the other runner to third."

He did better than that, shooting one of Marshall's screwballs into the right-field seats.

The win was only the Reds' fourth win in the 10 games since the All-Star break, but the feeble Dodgers have the same record.

The confidence that goes with a 12½-game lead is easy to find in the Reds' clubhouse.

Joe Morgan, touted as the National League most valuable player, is a classic example.

He hasn't had a hit in

BRYANT REFUSES ROZELLE 'TRADE' TO DETROIT

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle has awarded the Detroit Lions rights to Rams running back Cullen Bryant as compensation for the loss of Ron Jessie.

The Lions, hard hit by injuries in their offensive backfield, were jubilant.

"Bryant wasn't."

His lawyer, Ed Masry, said, "Bryant won't report to Detroit. He's not going. He's very happy with the Rams and wants to play for them."

"This was a shock to him," continued Masry, adding that he has sent a telegram to Rozelle asking that the order be rescinded. "He is the first veteran player ever awarded to another NFL team in a case like this and the move is contrary to federal and state constitutions. If Rozelle wants to make a test case out of it, we'll see that he does."

Jessie played out his option with the Lions and signed last month with the Rams.

Bryant, from U. of Colorado, was the Rams' top draft choice in 1973. He returned 36 kickoffs for 986 yards and two touchdowns last season, with his longest run back 93 yards.

Lions general manager Russ Thomas said he's "delighted to have Bryant."

"We feel he's a fine football player who has the potential to be an outstanding running back. At 24, he's a young player with a great future in front of him."

Ram general manager Don Klosterman learned of Rozelle's decision by phone on the field at Fullerton State, where he was watching the squad practice.

He showed obvious disappointment but, like owner Carroll Rosenbloom later, said, "We have two words on the decision—no comment. We've never said that before but we say it now."

Klosterman added tersely, "We submitted our case to the commissioner and that's what he ruled."

Rozelle has personally intervened in the "option compensation rule"—otherwise known as the Rozelle rule, currently pending decision after trial in Minneapolis—only five times. The last three cases involved the Rams.

In 1967, wide receiver Dave Parks played out his option with San Francisco and signed with New Orleans. When the clubs couldn't agree on compensation, Rozelle awarded the 49ers defensive end Kevin Hardy.

In 1968, defensive back Pat Fischer left St. Louis for Washington. Rozelle gave the Cardinals the Redskins' second and third-round draft choices.

In 1971, when Phil Olsen was rendered a free agent through a technicality in his contract with New England, Rozelle lifted the Rams' No. 1 draft choice and later a No. 3.

In 1972, the Rams signed Dick Gordon out of Chicago, and Rozelle gave the Bears a No. 1 draft choice in exchange.

In the Jessie-Bryant situation, a Rams' draft choice may also be awarded the Lions at season's end.

David Ray, the third highest scorer in Ram history and the team's regular place kicker for the last four seasons, was placed on waivers Friday.

In the off-season, the Rams acquired Tom Dempsey from Philadelphia. Dempsey holds the league record for the longest field goal—63 yards.

Koppel Terminal

Foodstuffs come in, go out to world

BY RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

Standing tall above the Port of Long Beach's sprawling skyline is the immediately recognizable symbol of a firm—and industry—now striving to make this already bustling waterfront into Southern California's grain gateway to the sea.

A nostalgic prairie stater quickly develops an acute case of homesickness while gazing at the symbol's white concrete cylinders and the tall and boxy "house."

For this Koppel Bulk Terminal facility, the one and only of its kind in Southern California, seemingly duplicates uncounted thousands of wheat elevators that for a century adorned prairie hamlets, towns and cities ranging northward from Texas through Kansas and the Middle Border states to Canada.

APPEARANCES are somewhat deceiving, as Koppel executives are quick to point out. Long term grain storage in that massive, 2.25 million bushel capacity "bin" is not the objective, they say. To get it in and out quickly is their goal, for the name of Koppel's real interest is trade—in wheat, corn, various feedstuffs—rather than in warehousing the stuff. "Warehousing, it won't even pay the overhead," says an executive.

Although practiced today with sophisticated methods unheard of only a few years past, theirs is an ancient trade followed by daring men across the millennia since ancient Phoenicia's prototype businessmen bought and sold commodities throughout the known world.

Today, grains still are shipped to the ends of the earth, Russia, where a wheat shipment was recently despatched, may receive more as a result of new sales completed this month. So far this market remains relatively small so far as this area is concerned.

INDIA REMAINS a major recipient of Long Beach-shipped wheat, this year is expected to purchase between 400,000 and 500,000 tons. China, which made a big buy in 1973, hopefully will reenter the local market. Other Pacific Rim nations, Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Central and South America increasingly are supplied via the Port of L.B.

At the Koppel terminal here, presently capable of moving some 24 million bushels annually, expansion plans now are awaiting approval by various environmental regulatory agencies. These could add almost 9 million bushels to the present 2.25 million bu. holding capacity, points out George E. Koppel, president and chief executive officer.

This export-import terminal, located on a deep water channel two miles from the open sea in Long Beach Outer Harbor, utilizes mechanized devices for cargo weighing, sampling, grading, fumigating and cleaning grains. Its basic structure was erected only in 1960.

WITH ITS ROOTS deeply planted in the Long Beach business community, the parent corporation increasingly is moving, in President Koppel's words, toward a "harmonious expansion specifically directed toward commodity originations, product movements and ultimate delivery of commodities."

to public and private entities at home and abroad.

Among the subsidiaries are Koppel Dock & Storage Co., Wilmington, an import auto service center and container terminal; the Stockton-based Petromark Inc., handlers of such bulk liquids as vegetable oils and petrochemicals; Palmco Inc. of Portland, Ore., a joint venture with Mitsubishi International Corp., dealing in cooking oils.

Even so, grain remains of paramount concern at Koppel. Says Robert L. Horne, vice president-international marketing and the trader-in-chief: "One day we buy, the next we become a seller."

TO ASSIST in the process a major branch office is maintained at the geographic center of America's wheat country, Salina, Kan.

Grain trading, as always, is an international activity. And Horne is quick to admit that Koppel is shadowed by six or so great multinational houses, U.S. or European-based. These immense firms are deep in numerous related commercial activities, banking, shipping, insurance and the general import-export trade.

So where are the sources of golden grain?

Kansas, still holding rank as America's No. 1 wheat producing state, produced some 357 million bushels in the "grain year" just ending. Neighboring Oklahoma was No. 2, with 162 million bu. Colorado to the west, where wheat grown east of the Rocky Mountains increasingly is playing a more significant role in the state's economy, brought in 145 million bu.

On the surface, at least, California's 60 million bu. production from the Great Central Valley was dwarfed by the prairie states. But wait a moment.

As Horne notes, this most recent Golden State crop was three times larger than yields in the late 1960s. Underlying this switch in crop emphasis: "In previous years there was little if any export of California wheat—and there wasn't very much of it to begin with. Our growers received no federal (crop) subsidies, unlike growers in most other parts of the U.S."

"By 1973, farmers here found they could grow enough to help supply world needs instead of using the grain to feed their cattle—an historical use in the Far Southwest.

"What's their growth potential?" Horne answered almost instantly. "Production could reach about 120 million bushels."

THE KOPPEL TERMINAL, dealing chiefly in feed grains during those years immediately following its construction in 1960,

LOOKING WEST are George E. Koppel, right, president of Koppel Bulk Loader Facility, and Robert L. Horne, international markets vice president. The firm

ultimately would attract Valley agriculturists toward this natural doorway to world markets.

Further strengthening the development of Long Beach as the Southland's main grain port were and are excellent rail and road transportation networks linking hinterland with coast.

Horne, during an extensive interview recently, repeatedly praised Port of Long Beach officials for their "great understanding and assistance" in helping develop a modern terminal. As is true in most port activities, the Board of Harbor Commissioners constructed physical facilities to the tenant's specifications, leasing it back to them.

Meanwhile, as California's wheat business grows stronger, Kansas, Oklahoma and Colorado remain prime sources. But a problem, to the local firm, is that a "natural port of exit" for those mid-central states is the Port of Houston. Rail freight rates in those areas, makers or breakers of commodity traders, often are oriented southward to the Gulf of Mexico and may be cheaper. There must excellent service and other "fringe benefits" to the ultimate buyer, compensating for higher freight tariffs.

Horne, who spends much of each working day buying or selling via the long-distance telephone, must strive valiantly to overcome an inherent handicap.

Allegations said 'unfair'

A NEWER PROBLEM, he says, are recent news stories in which the wheat trading fraternity came under attack for purportedly misgrading grain. Involved are what Horne and others in the trade label "unfair allegations"

Certain eastern dealers were charged by an unidentified USDA source with deliberately upgrading by misgrading poorer quality crops.

Industry officials say they "know of no indictments or charges of actual misgrading... The major problem seems to be bribes by shipping agents to obtain a clean ship document."

that some traders dishonestly misgraded grain.

In this country, the agriculture department has formalized five grades for all grain crops. U.S. ratings, known and used around the world, are based on a series of stringent quality control requirements, including weight and size, damage, moisture content and protein quantity.

"Those attacks were completely unfair," Horne declares. "The grain trade has the ability—and uses it—to police and correct itself."

When grain arrives at the firm's 1139 Panorama Drive headquarters, it becomes the responsibility of David Noe, a native Californian who grew up in Oklahoma. The former wheat grower, buyer and present Koppel assistant vice president for operations supervises incoming material, sees that it is properly, accurately weighed, cleaned, stored and finally transferred to a waiting ship. His are the headaches of shepherding a shipment to state agriculture department inspectors who will check its quality at least three times. And although the company's legal responsibility end when the cargo goes aboard ship, Noe nevertheless finds he often is called upon to assist with final details.

"There's not a lot of money in the grain business," he laughs. "You just have to love it."

Small business seminar in L.B.

A long awaited Business Development Seminar for current and future owners and managers of small businesses will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Ruth Bach Library branch, Bellflower Boulevard and Carson Avenue. It is free to the general public.

The meeting will include consulting sessions for the new business entrepreneur.

This one evening session, sponsored by the Small Business Administration, is designed to make SBA programs more accessible to the business public as well as the prospective venturer. Officials emphasize that the information presented will be of vital importance in the areas of financial management, fiscal control and site location.

GROWTH BUSINESSES will be discussed as well as the new generation of problems associated with energy and zoning. This pre-business session will focus its attention towards making the risk situation less of a speculation.

There will be an early bird question and answer period. Bring your problems with you and avoid the pitfalls of business failure.

Industry Week

Price hikes seen 'mild'

CLEVELAND — A high rate of inflation will not necessarily re-emerge with a pickup in business, Industry Week said Friday.

An important reason is that productivity will improve because factory output will be stepped up faster than employment will be increased. This spreads fixed costs over more units, the magazine for managers explained.

As a result, economists generally believe that inflation will hold down to a level of 5 per cent or 6 per cent, and perhaps less, during the rest of this year compared with rates of 12 per cent to 14 per cent as recently as a year ago.

Some of the economists believe that a continuation of relatively mild price increases "is the very worst" that is in store for the next few months.

THESE VIEWS on inflation are in contrast to fears held by many people that galloping inflation would return with a business revival. They observed that when business dropped of suddenly last fall that many prices held firm instead of declining. To them, inflation seemed "recession-proof" — entrenched in the system.

These people reasoned that with business now picking up, prices that stayed firm in recession could now shoot up dramatically.

Economists are addressing themselves to that possibility as the pickup develops, and the growing conclusion is: "Not necessarily." High inflation, they say, is not inevitable, and will probably not re-emerge on the basis of the business pickup alone, Industry Week reported.

During the most recent three-month period for which data are available, people began "beating" the effects of inflation, as personal income outstripped increases in consumer prices. Their total personal income climbed

Hubert Humphrey and telethons go together

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

It was during a Democratic Party Telethon and former Vice President Hubert Humphrey was handed a cue card by the show's producer, Eric Lieber, to introduce actress-singer Claudine Longet.

Squinting at the handwritten card, the ever-loquacious Humphrey launched into a flowery description of the talents of "a fine singer and good friend, CLAUDINE WINGIT."

SEN. HUMPHREY

KELLY LANGE

But he later talked his way out of the goof by showing the cue card on the air and pointing out that it looked like "Wingit" to him.

In another example of Humphrey's nonstop delivery — and the hazards of cue cards — the Minnesota senator was introducing Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas at last year's Democratic telethon. Bentsen, who was to give a short political speech, waited in vain as Humphrey raced through the introduction — and continued through the complete text of the speech.

At a reference to "here in Texas," Humphrey simply changed it to "here in Minnesota" without slowing down one bit.

The Texas senator simply smiled and nodded in agreement with everything Humphrey had to say.

Interruption from 11 to 11:30 tonight for 15 minutes of local and 15 minutes of network news, and a 30-minute interruption at 10:30 a.m. Sunday for the airing of "Issues and Answers."

Cohosts will be Alan Alda, Edward Asner, Lorne Greene, Helen Reddy, Della Reese and Susan Saint James. Among the many entertainment celebrities taking part will be Jack Lemmon, Tony Orlando, Freddie Prinze, Dinah Shore, Henry Fonda and Natalie Wood.

Sen. Humphrey's chores reportedly will include introducing Sen. Bentsen — again. And, inasmuch as the Texas senator is now making a bid for the Democratic nomination for the presidency, perhaps Hubert will slow down long enough to let him make his own speech.

"WEEKEND," late-night "newsmagazine" presented by NBC News, airs this evening from 11:30 to 1 on Channel 4. It will include features on the pleasantly independent lifestyle of the Cajuns of southwestern Louisiana, three young comedians trying out their acts in New York and a gourmet French restaurant in West Germany run by the Belgian army.

KELLY LANGE, KNBC weathercaster and special features reporter, has been named host of Channel 4's "Sunday" show. She had been cohosting the program with KNBC news anchorman Paul Moyer, who is leaving "Sunday" because of his busy schedule.

"Sunday" airs from 4:30 to 6 p.m.; and tomorrow's show will originate from the Seventh Annual Rough Water Swim at Seal Beach. The program will include an interview with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen — yes, him again.

KNAC RADIO, a rock music station in Long Beach (105.5 FM), has a new program director, Paul Sullivan, it has been announced by general manager James Harden. Sullivan leaves a similar position at WWW in Detroit, also a rock station. Earlier he held radio jobs in Los Angeles, Fresno, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Palm Beach, Fla.

Sullivan will begin a daily air shift Monday.

THE TIME has rolled around for another telethon to raise funds for the Democratic Party, and Happy Hubert — among other political bigwigs — will be winging it again.

"Tune in America," a 20½-hour show featuring music and comedy performed by show business celebrities, as well as political pitches by top-ranking Democrats, will be carried nationwide on ABC-TV and will originate at KABC in Los Angeles.

The telethon will start at 9 tonight on Channel 7, on a tape delay basis. There will be a 30-minute

VINCE EDWARDS STARS

Vince Edwards has been signed to star in "Test Case," the first episode in production for Columbia Pictures Television's new hour-long anthology series, Medical Story, for NBC. Diane Baker, Dane Clark and Edith Diaz also have been set as guest stars by executive producer Abby Mann and producer Christopher Morgan.

Edwards, who starred as a doctor in the long-running series Ben Casey, will portray a gynecologist who faces a possible murder charge when he performs an abortion. Miss Baker is a pediatrician who opposes him and Clark plays the head of an anti-abortion group. Miss Diaz is the patient.

A yearly ritual

Gully fires bare litter

By DICK EMERY

Grass-fire season lasts all summer in a gullied northwest section of San Pedro.

The wild oats and tumbleweeds grow waist-high on steep banks of the gullies, and almost daily through the summer, fires race through the weeds.

The fires mean hot, hard, at times dangerous work for city fire fighters.

For several hundred families who live in apartments and cottages along the brinks of the gullies, however, the grass fires mean a free show and excitement.

At the first whoop of a fire siren, groups of spectators appear where the view is good. Boys gallop to the center of action, or as close as firemen permit. They help drag the hoses. They carry shovels.

Firemen tolerate such aid. "Why fight it?" one sweat-streaked fireman explained, at a typical grass fire in a gully off Park Western Drive a few days ago. "This way, we can keep an eye on them so they won't get hurt."

As smoke swirls over the gully rims, languid groups on back steps pass the beer around, or the soda, or whatever refreshments are at hand. It may be noticed that the spicy smoke is bathing the wet laundry hanging on a neighbor's clothesline.

A voice says "There is Mrs. Gonzales' washing. It will smell of smoke."

No one takes in the laundry. The grass fires burn away high weeds which have hidden all kinds of discards. A gully, after all, is a handy place for pitching useless leftovers. High on the blackened slopes lie the cans and bottles. A little farther down, a belt of bigger stuff lines the gully wall—a crumpled window-screen, bent TV poles, a washboard, a legless ironing board, kids' wagons without wheels, bed springs, skeletal Christmas trees.

Farthest down in the gullies, in the very bottom, the fires reveal overturned grocery carts like battlefield casualties, whole clusters of carts. And down there, also, as foliage burns away, mysterious hideaways are exposed. Each place is equipped with such homely comforts as broken chairs, old sofas, even mattresses.

From above, the gully-rim dwellers notice the firemen kicking their way through such ruins, and see the jets of water turning to steam as firemen cool hot-spots. Every summer it's the same. The spectators ask each other who could have guessed such things were down there, and no one answers... the boys are all out helping the firemen.

After each fire, a man comes to take away the grocery carts, which belong to the supermarket half-a-mile up the hill.

Sandy claws

Junior lifeguards race to grab the lengths of garden hose in the sand at the foot of 37th Place Friday afternoon, top photo, in a contest known as "musical flags." Two sprints later in the elimination exercise, sand flies as four competitors grab for three lengths of hose. The contest, organized by Long Beach Marine Department Sgt. Pat Flynn, pitted Huntington Beach junior lifeguards against those from Long Beach. Long Beach won overall, with 198 points to 174. Friday's competition included seven events, with three age groupings for each event. In addition to "musical flags," youths competed in the "run-swim-run," beach sprint relays, a 600-yard swim, a paddle board relay, a swim relay, and a half mile beach run.

Auditor urges speedup of bill-paying by L.B.

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Long Beach, just like any of its residents, should pay its bills on time, according to City Auditor Murray T. Courson.

One of the recommendations in the annual audit of the city's general purpose fund is to speed up the city's "antiquated" system for paying bills, which has been the target of criticism from numerous vendors.

"It is not uncommon for invoices to be over a month old before they are paid," the audit said.

It pointed out that payments "seldom" are made within the period specified by individual vendors to qualify for cash discounts.

"We sympathize with the vendors and feel the city's antiquated payment procedures do need to be streamlined and speeded up, giving particular attention to identifying and expediting those purchases that involve cash discounts," it said.

All of the recommendations were on minor points, however, and the annual audit, which covered the 1973-74 fiscal year, said budgetary functions of the city were carried out according to the city council's budget approval and appropriate regulations and that expenditures were proper and all revenues properly deposited and accounted for.

L.B. symposium on 'Middle Years' set

A symposium on "How to Get the Most Out of the Middle Years" will be conducted for health care professionals Saturday, Aug. 2 in Long Beach Community Hospital auditorium.

Reservations are available from Dr. Williams S. Keenan of Long Beach.

Program director is Dr. Herbert Kent, chief of rehabilitation medicine at Long Beach Veterans Administration Hospital. Dr. Richard M. Johnson, vice president of the western division of the American Geriatrics Society, helped arrange the symposium.

Kent says the intent of the meeting is to develop the role of the physician, nurse and other health care personnel in stretching out the middle years for their patients.

Symposium topics include "Fat and Fortyish," "Skinny Deep," "A Shrink's View" and "Sex and Mat- ing."

Speakers include Dr. J. Edward

Berk, professor of medicine and head of the division of gastroenterology at UC Irvine College of Medicine; Dr. R. Jeffrey Herten, chief resident in dermatology at VA Hospital; Dr. Myrvin H. Ellestad, clinical professor of medicine at UCI and director of clinical physiology at Memorial Hospital Medical Center; and Dr. A. Estin Comarr, a professor both at USC and UC Irvine.

Other participants include Dr. Mathew Ross, chief of the psychiatry service at VA Hospital; Dr. Hubert Gulak, director of physical medicine and rehabilitation at St. Mary Medical Center; George S. Rhodes, Ed. D., assistant chief of the psychology service at the VA.

Sponsors of the symposium include Community Hospital, Memorial Hospital Medical Center, St. Mary Medical Center, VA Hospital, UC Irvine and the American Geriatrics Society.

FOR THE 1973-74 fiscal year, the general purpose fund involved revenues of $64.2 million, the audit said. By comparison the estimated general purpose fund revenues for the 1975-76 fiscal year are $85.4 million.

Property taxes produced 27 cents of each $1 for the general purpose fund in 1973-74, according to the audit. Interfund transfers and reimbursements accounted for another 21 cents, and the sales tax produced 16 cents. The city's utility users tax contributed eight cents of each dollar.

A major portion of the general purpose fund tax dollar goes to finance public safety, the audit revealed. Police got 30 cents and fire 20 cents, while another four cents went to "other public safety and health" uses. Public service was allocated 21 cents.

Among the audit recommendations was one that the city consolidate multiple payments to a single vendor on one monthly check, resulting in a "significant" reduction in check vouchers and purchase orders.

FOR EXAMPLE, the audit said that during March and April of 1975, a total of 173 checks were written to General Telephone Co. and 39 checks were written to Southern California Edison Co.

Courson said his office has been informed an attempt to implement this recommendation will be made during the 1975-76 fiscal year.

The audit also urged that the preparation and publication of a comprehensive annual financial report, covering all city funds and financial operations be resumed.

The last financial statements published by the city's Department of Finance were for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, according to the audit. Annual statements for 1972-73 have not been released, and statements for 1973-74 have not been completed, it added.

Sato to hold special meeting on neighborhood problems

In response to complaints about vandalism, youths beating up others, and neglect of property, Councilwoman Eunice N. Sato will meet with citizens today from 2 to 4 p.m. in the conference room of Bret Harle Library, 1595 W. Willow St.

Mrs. Sato invited residents of the Seventh Council District in the area west of Los Angeles River to meet with her and voice any concerns they have about these or other activities in the area.

She has been holding meetings at Veterans Park, 101 E. 28th St., at 7:30 p.m. on the third Wednesday of each month following the meeting of the Wrigley Association, but said she wants to give residents west of the river a more convenient meeting place.

"I have been receiving numerous calls about the misbehavior of young people, neglect of property, littered alleys and yards," she said.

From L.B.'s sister city

Japanese students tour area

By TIM BURT
Staff Writer

Two visiting students and a teacher from Long Beach's sister city of Yokkaichi, Japan, began their tour of Southern California Friday with a bird's-eye view from a Cessna 172 Skyhawk plane.

The visitors, who came to this country as part of an exchange program which sends Long Beach students to Yokkaichi on alternate years, had to squint to see through one of Southern California's most noticeable physical characteristics—smog, which measured 23 parts per million in some Southland areas Friday.

Students Utako Kawamura, 17 and Osamu Furukawa, 17, and a teacher from a Japanese high school, Takahiro Taniguchi, 42, were taken on an aerial tour of such Southernland attractions as the Queen Mary, Marineland, Los Angeles and Disneyland by pilot Glen Miller to start their four-week stay here.

Ken Austin, chairman of the city-sponsored program, said the visitors, who are staying for two-week periods with different Long Beach families, will be a busy touring Southern California's top cities.

"Disneyland is the place we want to see," said Miss Kawamura, a high school senior who was on a women's basketball team in Japan.

She has enjoyed Long Beach's beaches "because we can swim in them. Our beaches are too dirty to swim in." But despite her love of the water, the visitor said she didn't want to try one of the Southland's favorite sports—surfing. "That scares me," she said.

Furukawa said he has enjoyed playing Ping Pong and hopes to participate in other California sports while here. He said he has been impressed with Long Beach. "This city is better. I like the trees and the weather," he said.

When asked how to rate Long Beach's girls, Furukawa nodded his head and smiled.

The high school senior, who enjoys reading and listening to music, said he would also like to see his country's favorite sport, baseball, performed on a major league level at Dodger or Anaheim Stadiums.

Taniguchi, who has two sons, said he has been impressed with the American people so far. "They are very beautiful people and have been very kind to me," the English teacher said.

The visitors will be in Long Beach until Aug. 21, during which time they will tour such attractions as Universal Movie Studios, the Queen Mary, Catalina, Arrowbear Music Camp and the Independent Press-Telegram.

They will then return to Yokkaichi, an industrial city with a population of around 225,000 located about 350 miles south of Tokyo.

Brown names 5 new judges

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. filled vacancies on Superior Courts benches in Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Bernardino, Butte and Placer counties Friday.

The Democratic chief executive named five new judges. They are:

—Sacramento attorney William K. Morgan, 54, who earned his law degree in his 30s after running a funeral home. He was named to fill a new position on the Sacramento County Superior Court.

—Howard W. Wiener, 44, a West Covina attorney, who was appointed to the San Bernardino County Superior Court. He is a member of the State Bar's board of governors.

—Municipal Court Judge Bonnie Lee Martin, 45, of Los Angeles, who will fill a vacancy on the Los Angeles County Superior Court.

—Reginal M. Watt, a 62-year-old Chico attorney, who was named to the Butte County Superior Court. He is a member of the California Trial Lawyers board of governors.

—And Tahoe City attorney William A. Newsom, 41, who will sit on the Placer County Superior Court.

The appointees are among the governor's first judicial appointees. He had already made four appointments and has some 70 vacancies left to fill.

Pines' car still in thief's hands

Associated Press

The score stood at bandit-2, police-0 Friday in the saga of Los Angeles City Atty. Burt Pines' stolen official car.

Pines' car, so new it didn't have license plates, was stolen from a guarded city garage last week by a man police believe is the same person arrested 13 times as a juvenile for stealing police cars and other official vehicles.

Police tried everything, including calling the thief on the car's mobile radio, to recover the vehicle. No luck.

Then Arlene Friedland's car was involved in an accident with the missing vehicle. The other driver said he was a police officer, but when Mrs. Friedland checked and found he was not, a trap was laid Thursday at a body shop where the driver of Pines' car agreed to meet the woman.

The trap failed when the driver of the stolen car apparently spotted trouble and sped off, losing chasing officers.

Police have amended their description of the missing auto to include accident damage as well as city markings, a radio telephone antenna and no license plates.

Jury award cut $6 million

INDIO (AP)—An $8 million punitive damage award voted by a jury for a paralyzed auto accident victim was ordered cut to $2 million Friday by Superior Court Judge Richard M. Marsh.

Marsh told the jury, which voted the larger penalty against Reliance Insurance Co., it had acted improperly in setting the sum when it earlier said damages on the specific charges should be $2 million.

Robert Blackwood, the accident victim, charged Reliance took the turning signal lights from his jeep after the accident and that adjusters working for Reliance took a deposition from him while pretending to represent his insurance firm.

GENERAL Adjustment Bureau, a claims adjuster hired by Reliance, was ordered to pay Blackwood $250,000 in damages for its part in the case.

Blackwood said he was struck from behind while making a left turn in Blythe in 1969 by a truck belonging to the Desert Ginning Co. His suit contended agents for Reliance took the turning lights from his jeep when it developed that whether he had given a turn signal would figure in later court proceedings.

Arrest ordered in phony check case

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — George Hatcher, indicted in Los Angeles as the alleged head of an "ambulance chasing ring," was ordered arrested Friday when he failed to appear in court on grand theft charges.

Municipal Court Judge

Frank P. Kearney ordered the forfeiture of $50,000 in bail posted earlier by Hatcher and issued a bench warrant. Police said they believed Hatcher was in Mexico.

Hatcher was arrested in March and charged with three counts of grand theft after he allegedly bought $10,000 in sea food from Pierce Fisheries here for a cannery operation in Mexico and paid with worthless checks.

Hatcher was indicted last year in Los Angeles on charges he solicited accident victims for attorneys, who are prohibited by law from such acts. The alleged ring operated at County USC Medical Center.

Youth's trial set in robbery killing

A young Long Beach man charged with killing one sailor and wounding another during a robbery in a downtown alley was bound over for trial in Superior Court Friday.

Patrick Anthony Mannery, 19, of 1545 W. 19th St., was ordered to stand trial by Municipal Court Judge W.H. Winston Jr. after a preliminary hearing Friday morning.

Mannery, who remains in sheriff's custody under $50,000 bail, was ordered returned to the Superior Court's Department J Aug. 8 for the setting of a trial date.

The young defendant was arrested July 1 by homicide investigators who alleged he matched a description given them by witnesses who saw a man run out of an alley behind Mannery's apartment the night before.

He is charged with the murder of James Bartley, 19, and the wounding of Bartley's friend, 18-year-old Doug Morris. Both men were stationed aboard the USS St. Louis at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard.

Homicide investigators said the seamen met two men at the Navy base's Enlisted Men's Club and were invited to a party in Long Beach.

Instead, they were driven to the alley, forced out of the car and robbed, police said. When one of the sailor's tried to resist, they added, both were shot.

San Pedro kidnaper sentenced

James Lee Trice, a 46-year-old San Pedro man convicted of kidnapping and rape charges stemming from an assault on a 57-year-old woman, has been sentenced to a minimum of three years in state prison.

Trice, convicted of the charges July 3, was sentenced Thursday by Long Beach Superior Court Judge Max Wisot.

During his trial, witnesses testified that Trice was the man who appeared at an all-night cafe in San Pedro last Nov. 3, apparently helping the injured victim to contact friends there.

The woman's hip was broken when she was assaulted and thrown down on a nearby street by a man who then pushed her into a waiting car and drove off, later raping her in the parked vehicle, police reported.

Deputies nab bank suspect

Two sheriff's deputies arrested an alleged bank robber Friday afternoon as he walked from a Norwalk bank that had just been held up, deputies said.

Deputies Karl Bristine and Ross Smith said they captured and disarmed the suspect about 2:30 p.m., as he walked out the front door of the Security Pacific Bank branch at 11716 Rosecrans Ave.

Booked at the Norwalk sheriff's station in connection with the robbery was maintenance man Charles Bradburn, 30, of 14520 Elmercroft Ave., Norwalk. The deputies said the suspect surrendered at gunpoint a .22-caliber rifle and a sack containing $5300.

EARL'S PEARLS

Today's Best Laugh: A TV fan described Telly Savalas: "He once had wavy hair. Now the waves are gone, and there's nothing left but the beach."

Wish I'd Said That: With the city's dog litter problem on the rise, writes Carmine J. Santilli, it may soon be "the slide walks of New York."

Remembered Quote: "Marriage gives some men a new lease on life — at double the rent."

Earl's Pearls: TV writer Stephen Lord figures that Hollywood is really a broad-minded place: "I saw a massage parlor with a side door that said 'Family Entrance.'"

The late Herb Shriner once explained why there was no bank in his home town: "No need for one. Soon as anybody saved up any money, he left town."

We have the highest standard of living in the world, says the cynic — too bad we can't afford it.

We're still trying to figure out this sign in a cemetery: "It is Forbidden to Pick Flowers From Any Grave Except Your Own."
